Lawson Cited In Contempt As Audience Cheers, Boos

Writer Challenges Committee Powers; Johnston Clashes With Chairman

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Screen Writer John Howard Lawson, identified as a holder of Communist Party membership card No. 47275, was cited for contempt of Congress yesterday when he tried to avoid answering questions on his political beliefs.

Screeching "Hitler Germany . . . Hitler tactics," Lawson was led from the witness stand before the House Committee on Un-American Activities by six Capitol policemen.

Mingled cheers and boos sounded through the bellowing bedlam as the witness shouted and Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) beat with his gavel.

Back among the spectators were some 20-odd Hollywood luminaries, including Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall, here to protest the committee's procedure. They are members of the new "Committee for the Preservation of the First Amendment to the Constitution," and they say they want to preserve free speech.

The howling hubbub was followed in the afternon by the appearance of Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America.

Johnston's exchange with the committee was quiet but sprinkled with acid on both sides.

Johnston Fears for Sales

Johnston asked the committee to correct the "damaging impression" that Hollywood is "running over with Communists and communism."

He said the industry had a tremendous financial stake in the matter since foreign sales were a considerable portion of its revenue. Already, he asserted, Communist-dominated countries won't buy American pictures and now such countries as Argentina and Brazil may bar them because of impressions spread at the committee hearings.

Johnston also asked the committee to correct a subcommittee report "that some of the most flagrant Communist propaganda films were produced as the result of White House pressure."

"This charge," Johnston stated, "has been completely refuted by the testimony before you."

Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.) asserted that the motion-picture producers who had appeared before the committee had "done a noble job of acquitting the industry" of any charges of Communist domination.

Ask About Johnston Assistant

"I think the motion-picture industry will come out of this hearing with a very fine reputation," McDowell commented.

The committee, however, pressed Johnston for information about one of his assistants, Edward T. Cheyfitz, a former member of the Communist Party.

Johnston said that Cheyfitz had joined the party in 1932 when he was 18 years old, and had become "disillusionized" in 1939.

Chief Investigator Robert E. Stripling promptly asked why, if Cheyfitz had left the party in 1939, he was still listed as active in the American Peace Mobilization in 1941, when it was picketing the White House at the time of the Stalin-Hitler alliance in protest against national defense measures.

Johnston indicated that Cheyfitz would have to answer for himself.

The industry spokesman, however, put letters in the record from such experts as James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, to show that Cheyfitz had long since broken off any Communist affiliations.

Carey, anti-Communist leader in the CIO, said "it has been more than five years to my direct knowledge since he has had even a remote connection with the Communist movement."

'Drunks' Note By Ruhland Irks Mason

Health Chief Accused Of Noncooperative Stand on Alcoholics

Commissioner Guy Mason, yesterday charged District Health Officer George C. Ruhland, with "not wanting" to cooperate in the handling of drunks.

Dr. Ruhland quickly issued a denial of the charge and showed surprise at the commissioner's statement.

The cross-fire of statements developed as District officials tolled with the problem of the injured drunk. The day ended with plans for a full-dress discussion to be held today at 10:30 a.m. by all officials involved.

Dr. Ruhland wrote to Commissioner Mason that he had obtained from Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett a list of an "alleged" 600 persons refused admission to Gallinger Hospital. He explained that little could be done "with regard to this question until the Health Department be implemented with enlarged personnel as well as enlarged housing facilities."

Suggests Jail Hospital

"In the interim," Dr. Ruhland recommended "that the hospital facilities at the jail be made available for patients apparently under the influence of alcohol, who could be housed as competently as in the psycopathic ward."

Commissioner Mason and Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West promptly declared it was not legal to lock persons up in the jail without formal charges.

Gallinger Superintendent Dr. A. R. Sweeney took a similar position on the limited facilities at his hospital in a separate memorandum. He expressed surprise at Barrett's complaint about 600 patients being denied admission. He said he had not known until the conference with the Commissioners last Wednesday that police had any difficulties on admission of patients.

After studying the letter, Commissioner Mason noted tersely, "It looks like Ruhland does not want to cooperate . . . my interpretation of Dr. Ruhland's letter is that he doesn't want to cooperate.

Slightly Heavier Load

"The fact is that it adds less than two patients per day to the load at Gallinger. It seems to me he could find room in the general medical wards," Mason said.

Dr. Ruhland also wrote to Superintendent Barrett promising to make "a very thorough investigation" of the 600 cases.

He told Barrett that "there can

U. S. Awarded Oil Lands Off Calif. Coast

But Supreme Court Fails to Stop Wells Licensed by State

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

The Government won the rich oil lands off the California coast by a clear-cut Supreme Court decree yesterday.

But oil will go right on gushing from the private wells that were licensed offshore by the State—the wells the Government sued to stop—and the State is free to license others. California's claim to three big areas is conceded—out of court—by Attorney General Tom C. Clark and Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug.

This comes about through two stipulations Clark and Krug made with California's Attorney General Fred M. Howser last July, a month after the Supreme Court said the lands under the California marginal sea belonged to the United States and not to California.

Numerous Deductions

One of these agreements said the wells were to go on operating paid to California was to be put and that the money the drillers into a fund and paid over to the Government when the amount of its claim was settled. What the Government might get was limited to the value of the crude oil as it came out of the sea, less costs, rents, royalties and the like.

The other agreement said the Government did not claim some of the land in the bays of San Francisco, San Pedro and San Diego.

The Supreme Court threw these stipulations out of its record yesterday, saying:

"The Attorney General and the Secretary of the Interior purport to renounce and disclaim for the United States Government paramount governmental power over certain particularly described submerged lands in the California coastal area. In such stipulations the united States Attorney General and Secretary of the Interior furthermore purport to bind the United States to agreements which purport toauthorize state lessees of California coastal submerged lands to continue to occupy and exploit those lands, and which agreements also purport to authorize California under conditions set out to execute leases for other submerged coastal lands.

"Robert E. Lee Jordan has filed a petition . . . to have the foregoing stipulations and agreements

District Man On Air Crash Death List

43 Killed When Swedish Airliner Strikes Mountain Top Near Athens

Athens, Oct. 27 (AP).—A Washington, D. C., businessman and a woman secretary of the United States State Department today were reported among the 43 or 44 killed last night when a Swedish airliner crashed atop towering Mount Hymettos, 12 miles southeast of Athens.

The Swedish Airlines System ABA said the businessman was Edwin Wanner, 39, of Washington. It also listed Gloria Marie Rusch, 24, a U. S. State Department secretary whose home is in Dallas, Tex. She was en route from Manila to Oslo, Norway.

(Identity of Wanner was uncertain. The Washington telephone directory lists Edwin F. Wanner at 8611 Lynbrook dr., Bethesda, and Edwin P. Wanner, 2100 Connecticut ave., both of whom are now in the Washington area.)

(The State Department in Washington said it had a foreign service officer named Gloria M. Rusch, 24, of 411 Lincoln ave., Grove City, Pa., that she was being transferred from Manila to Oslo and that she was supposed to go by air.)

The plane was en route from Turkey. Wreckage was scattered for a distance of 500 yards, and "there were only three or four bodies remaining," a searcher said.

In Stockholm, the Swedish airlines system termed the crash "the worst disaster in the history of Swedish commercial aviation."

Oil Slick May Be Clew To Missing Clipper

Juneau, Alaska, Oct. 27 (AP).—The Coast Guard rushed three boats to a spot between Mary Island and Annette Island on the possibility that an oil slick reported there might be a clew to the Pan American World Airways Clipper plane missing since Sunday with 18 aboard.

The Coast Guard denied earlier reports that plane wreckage had been sighted on Percy Island, near Ketchikan.

All available vessels kept up a 24-hour hunt, and search planes, aloft since early morning, concentrated in the Ketchikan area where the DC-4 airliner vanished after radioing the Annette Island airfield at 1:44 p. m. Sunday that "extreme turbulence" prevented a scheduled landing.

Nothing more was heard from the plane but searchers clung to hopes that veteran pilot A. N. Monsen might have managed an emergency landing in an isolated spot. The plane had flotation wings designed to keep it afloat briefly at sea; it had a life raft, life belts and emergency supplies.

New Election Demanded By De Gaulle

RPF Vote Victory Cited by General In Open Bid for Return to Power

Paris, Oct. 27 (AP).—General De Gaulle made his first open bid for return to power in France today with a demand for dissolution of the National Assembly and the holding of new general elections.

He said the results in the municipal elections, where his anti-Communists Rally of the French People (RPF) Party won nearly 40 per cent of the vote, justified that action.

Parliamentary sources said the immediate effect of his move would be to produce a slight majority for Socialist Premier Paul Ramadier's coalition cabinet in a vote of confidence to be posed when the Assembly convenes tomorrow.

These sources declared all "republican forces" were opposed to De Gaulle's proposal, and predicted the Communists, who have bitterly assailed Ramadier's regime, would abstain when the vote is taken Thursday.

De Gaulle said the Communists had lost "at least one seventh of their electors and many municipalities. Thus, many citizens who were led astray by these bad apostles are expressing their will for social justice and national renovation."

Ramadier's position was seen as receiving a boost when officials of the French rail workers' union declared the government was prepared to comply with 85 per cent of their demands and added, "there has never been a question at this time of calling a strike."

Returns were still incomplete from yesterday's voting in the smaller towns and villages for municipal officers, but they showed the Socialists and Radical-Socialists a dominant factor there despite inroads by De Gaulle's RPF.

Taft Predicts Congress Will Give Assistance To Europe by Dec. 19

First-Hand Reports

Food Council Hears Warnings Of Winter Famine in Europe

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Two stark words, "famine" and "starvation," entered freely into discussions of the world food situation by 35 delegates, many just arrived from food-deficit countries, to the International Emergency Food Council here yesterday.

This "third winter of postwar food shortages," Secretary-General Dr. Dennis A. FitzGerald, told the meeting "will be the worst yet."

Imports of cereals this crop year, FitzGerald said, "need to be six or seven million tons larger than last year just to maintain last year's Spartan bread rations."

In spite of this increased need, he added, estimated exports available vary only slightly from the amount shipped last year. Significantly, Dr. FitzGerald, did not estimate the grain available from this country at the high figure of 570 million bushels, set as the goal early this month by President Truman.

Neither did he set the figure of American exports as low as the 470 million bushels estimated as the limit available by the Cabinet Food Committee, based on forecasts of domestic consumption and other needs in this country. Instead he hit a compromise of about 535 million bushels. Figures set as goals for other exporting countries, Canada, Argentina and Australia, were the same as those countries furnished last year.

While the delegates from abroad were discussing the "imminent danger of famine," an American group, including the Advertising Council of New York City, was hearing the same story, and the outlines of what this country plans to do about it, at a meeting at the White House.

Details of the proposed Marshall Plan for European reconstruction and the program for stop-gap aid until that plan becomes effective, were told.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson explained in dramatic fashion just how each American could aid in President Truman's food conservation drive by the Citizens Food Committee.

Anderson pointed out that each

Price Advance In Bread Stirs Few Protests

2 Major Bakeries Discontinue Wasteful Consignment Delivery

Greater Washington area housewives, already hardened to steadily rising prices, yesterday accepted a cent a loaf bread jump with little apparent complaint.

Most bakeries raised their bread prices a cent a loaf. Most groceries checked disclosed that they had passed the increase on to the consumers.

The Charles Schneider Baking Co., which raised its wholesale price from 11 to 12 cents a loaf, also jumped rolls 2 cents a dozen. However, the general manager, Lewis G. Graeves, said he had received no complaints.

Freeman H. Sisson, Continental Baking Co. official and head of the baking division of the Merchants & Manufacturers Association, said few complaints were reported since "people were more or less expecting" the jump.

Two major District bakeries last night disclosed the discontinuance of consignment deliveries of bread to groceries starting today.

The action was taken in compliance with a request from the District Citizens Food Conservation Committee, Chairman James E. Colliflower at the committee's first meeting Thursday urged the bakers to halt the traditional practice.

The two bakeries are the Schneider firm and Rice's. An official of the Holzbeierlein & Sons, Inc., bakery said he would follow suit "when all the big fellows stop."

Under the consignment practice, bread is left by route salesmen for sale by the grocer. Unsold loaves are collected the next day and a credit is given for them.

Ask Damages, Seniority

Twenty-one Negro locomotive firemen yesterday filed suit here in United States District Court charging "continuing discrimination" against Negroes employed by southern railroads.

The suit named as defendants the Southern Railway Co., Atlantic Coast Line, Seaboard Air Line, and many affiliates, and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and its lodges No. 7 and 532.

The plaintiffs said they were acting for themselves and "more than a thousand Negro firemen employed on the lines." Their suit, they said, seeks to force the railroads to "discontinue discriminatory practices on their own lines and on 17 other southern railroads and railroad terminals which they own or control."

They charged the carriers and the unions with conspiring to class Negroes as "nonpromotable," and thereby deprive them of "lawful employment . . . and rights and property."

Seek Damages

They asked damages for loss of wages, restoration of seniority rights and reinstatement of Negro firemen to their positions. The suit further asked that unions be enjoined from acting as bargaining agent "as long as the brotherhood does not act fairly in behalf of all locomotive firemen."

Primarily seeking a permanent injunction against continuing operation of an agreement entered into between the railroads and the brotherhood on February 18, 1941, the suit asks issuance of a temporary injunction pending hearing on the plea for the permanent injunction.

In an individual but similar suit last week the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in Baltimore, ruled against the Brother-

Marshall Plan Aid Also May Be Available Then, Senator Asserts

A forecast that Congress will provide stop-gap aid for Europe by December 19, and possibly Marshall Plan assistance as well, yesterday stepped up the special session foreign aid time table.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) made the statement in Boston after calling a meeting of the Senate Republican Steering Committee for November 14, three days before Congress convenes in special session.

Taft said he is sure Congress will act on interim aid to Europe before the Christmas holidays start.

"It is possible Congress will act on the whole Marshall Plan by that date (December 19)" he said, International News Service reported.

Meetings Announced Here

A Taft spokesman in Washington announced the earlier-than-expected November 14 GOP Steering Committee call. The congressional Joint Economic Committee, of which Taft also is chairman, will meet the morning of the same day to weigh price policies.

In Boston, Taft disclosed that the President will place the long-range Marshall Plan, as well as interim relief measures, before Congress when it convenes November 17.

Taxt expressed doubt, however, that Congress would provide a grand total of eight million dollars for foreign aid next year. He said that was one of the figures mentioned, but he would be unwilling to go above a four and a half to five billion rate.

Connally Disagrees

In Washington, Senator Tom Connally of Texas, ranking Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he didn't agree that both short and long range aid measures could be handled in the special session. He said Congress should concentrate on passing interim aid swiftly.

In other developments:

1. Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), chmairman-designate of the Democratic National Committee, said that foreign aid should be given priority oser price legislation and the two major parties should foryo "partisanship" on both issues. He urged tax reduction be left completely off the special session agenda.

2. Representative Fred J. Crawford (R., Mich.), in a letter to all members of Congress, called for a congressional investigation of "inflationary" policies and programs of the Truman Administration. Crawford accused the President of "playing politics at the expense of world peace" when he listed high prices first in his special session call.

Hearings Postponed

3. Chairman Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) of the House Agriculture Committee indefinitely postponed hearings in the far west on long range agriculture policy. Hope wired Representative Abe M. Goff (R., Idaho) of the postponement, but gave no reason for it. Goff said re assumed the special session caused the change in plans.

A Republican drive to cut taxes in the special session and tie the blame for high prices on the Truman Administration was already in full swing when McGrath put out his "no political" feeler.

"I would like to think of this session as completely outside the field of partisan politics," he said.

Just Back From Europe

Just returned from a European tour with Senate Appropriations and Judiciary committeemen, McGrath said foreign aid should come first in the special session and price action should follow "in the proper order." He said tax cutting should wait on short and long-range foreign assistance, and come only if we have the money left over.

The man who will take over the Democratic helm at a national committee meeting tomorrow, said high prices are certain to be a "dominant" 1948 campaign issue unless "something is done meanwhile to stabilize prices."

"If both parties desire to give

Criticism at Home Clouded Byrnes' Return From Moscow

This is a serialization of James F. Byrnes' "Speaking Frankly"—6 of 15 chapters of the book published October 15, 1947, by Harper & Brothers. Copyright, 1947, by Donald S. Russell, trustee of the James F. Byrnes Foundation (a Charitable Trust).

By James F. Byrnes

DURING our stay in Paris, I was to experience one more demonstration that bipartisanship does not necessarily insure unity. Long before the Paris meeting, I had learned that the most conscientious effort to make a just peace would not receive united support at home. I have already reported the criticism I encountered when, at London, the Council of Foreign Ministers could not agree. I was prepared for that. But I was not prepared for some of the criticism I received when, at Moscow, we did agree.

The story of the Moscow meeting, I have told; the long negotiations, the final session which ended at 3:30 a. m., our take-off for the United States four hours later at 7:30 a. m., December 27. My statement that we were thoroughly exhausted when we landed at Washington at noon on the twenty-ninth will be fully understood. Nevertheless, I went directly to the State Department and to work.

Upon asking when I could see the President, an employe at the White House told me that the President was cruising down the Potomac and expected to remain on his boat for several days. I requested that a message be sent to him saying that I had returned and would like to report to him at his convenience and that I expected to make a radio speech the following evening about the work of the conference.

Shortly thereafter, I received an invitation to visit the President that afternoon on his boat, which was anchored near Quantico. I took a plane and reached Quantico about 4:30.

Truman Approved

AFTER I had reported to the President on what had happened at the conference, he expressed wholehearted approval of my actions. He asked me to remain for dinner. There were present, as I recall, members of the President's staff who frequently accompanied him on such trips: Admiral Leahy, George Allen, General Vaughn, Clark Clifford, Charles Ross, Matthew Connelly, General Graham, and Judge Rosenman, who was working on a speech the President was to deliver the following week.

While we were at dinner, the President asked me to repeat what I had said to him about the conference, and I did so. From time to time the President interrupted to express his approval. There was

'About 400' Football Ducats Recovered

Naval Academy Holds Middie In Probe of Ticket Scalping

An unidentified midshipman was under confinement at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., last night while authorities here and at the academy investigated him for speculations in Navy football tickets.

He was placed under restriction for a "Class A" offense, most serious in the academy's disciplinary system, " pending outcome of a probe which followed the recovery of "about 400" Navy football tickets from a civilian.

The civilian, an academy spokesman said, identified himself as "Harry Rubin of Philadelphia," and said he was acting only as a "messenger." He was stopped and searched as he attempted to leave the academy grounds by the main gate, on October 18.

Academy officials declined to say whether the seized tickets were for the Navy-Cornell game, on October 18; the Navy-Penn game, last Saturday, or both. Tickets for those games were the only ones printed and distributed at that time.

An Academy spokesman said "Rubin" was picked up after telephone operators at the Academy received an anonymous tip that day that "scalpers were on the grounds." "Rubin" the spokesman said, "implicated" the midshipman.

The civilian was forced to give up the tickets but was not held.

An Academy statement said that full particulars on the case had been forwarded to the office of the

Peasant Leaders of Europe Plan Joint Anti-Red Action

London, Oct. 27 (AP).—A leader of the Serbian (Yugoslav) Peasant Party said today exiled leaders of several European peasant parties met secretly over the weekend and planned a full-scale anti-Communist propaganda offensive to be launched as soon as Stanislaw Mikolajczyk reaches London or Washington.

The Serb, Dr. Milan Gavrilovic, said representatives of the Yugoslav, Romanian, Bulgarian, Czechoslovak and Polish peasants discussed means of intensifying their propaganda and organization to combat the "Cominform" — the new nine-nation Communist information bureau.

Gavrilovic said the Peasant International, despite fundamental differences in principle between Peasant parties and right-wing Socialists, would have to "consider seriously" the formation of a united front together with other world-wide anti-Communist political parties.

no expression of disapproval or approval by any other except Admiral Leahy, who said that my report made him feel much better about the situation but that he did not approve of the agreement on Romania and Bulgaria. I reminded him that both of us had been at Yalta and at Potsdam when President Roosevelt and President Truman had entered into agreements on the same subjects, seeking to establish provisional governments that would include representation of all political parties and that would provide for free elections and the four freedoms. These agreements, I added, had not been kept by either of the two states or by the Soviets. The Moscow agreement, I told him, was simply one more effort to achieve the objective of the Yalta and Potsdam agreements. At Moscow we had secured what previously the Soviets had opposed—the agreement to send Ambassador Harriman, Ambassador Clark Kerr, and Mr. Vyshinski to Romania to seek ways to carry out the agreement. The effort might not be successful, I said, but the result could not be any worse than the previous situation. I asked what he would have done. I received no information.

Immediately after dinner I asked to be excused because I had to fly back to Washington; because of the rain and sleet then falling I feared a low ceiling at Washington. There was no further discussion of our foreign problems.

The President invited me to come back New Year's Eve and spend the night on the ship, and I promised to return.

Message From Hull

WHEN I went ashore I found that the sleet had covered the wings of my plane and it was impossible to use it. Therefore, I had to return to Washington by automobile. The Marine officer who kindly offered to drive me to Washington found he had undertaken an exceedingly difficult task as the sleet kept all the windows and windshield of the car covered with ice. Consequently, it was late when I reached home. That automobile trip, following the long journey from Moscow, made December 29 a far from perfect day. But when I walked in the door at home, Mrs. Byrnes handed me a message that gave the day at least a perfect ending. It was from my thoughtful friend and counselor, Cordell Hull. It said:

My Dear Jim: My heartiest congratulations on the splendid progress made at the Moscow Conference. Understanding, confidence, friendliness and the whole spirit of international cooperation have been greatly improved by the work of this conference.

The next night I made to the people my radio report on the conference. I explained the agreements reached and observed that they "should bring hope to the war-weary people of many lands." I also expressed the belief that "the meeting in Moscow did serve to bring about better understanding."

When I returned to the President's ship, the night of the thirty-first, he congratulated me on the report. He said the party on board had listened the previous night and considered it a convincing statement.

Within a few days, however, one or two newspaper columnists wrote that the President had wired me to come to his ship and had expressed strong disapproval of my agreements. They stated that there was ill feeling between the President and the Secretary of State. There was a general understanding among the newspaper correspondents that the information came from the White House and critics felt encouraged to attack me when it was rumored that the criticisms were shared by the President's official family.

Stories Continued

THE FACT is the President did not on that occasion nor at any other time express to me disapproval of any position I took at the meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers or any other meetings. Nor did he ever express to me disapproval of any statement I made on our foreign policy.

In the President's letter to Stalin written before the Moscow Conference, the President approved most of the proposals agreed to at Moscow.

My experience with the Moscow agreements demonstrated that in pursuit of a truly national foreign policy one has to be prepared for criticism from both the right and the left. Had these agreements been as favorable to the Soviet Union as some critics have charged, the Soviets would not have violated them. And the fact that ever since then we have been protesting against these violations indicates that they were in the best interests of the liberated states.

However, the person or persons inspiring the stories of dissension between the President and myself continued their efforts. In at least one press conference the President denied such dissension, but the stories persisted. A man who holds public office learns to disregard misrepresentations, but I admit these untrue stories did not make life any easier for me in the strenuous days of early 1946.

Another political battle fought by Mr. Byrnes while he was Secretary of State began when Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace made a speech in Madison Square Garden in September, 1946, sharply criticizing our foreign policy. Within a week, the battle was over, Mr. Wallace had resigned from the Cabinet, and Mr. Byrnes was continuing his work at the peace conference in Paris. The first complete revelation of what happened during that week, including the transcript of a teletype conversation between Paris and the White House, is in the next installment of "Speaking Frankly," which will be published tomorrow.

Roosevelt Never Voiced Disapproval of Stand

"The fact is the President did not on that occasion nor at any other time express to me disapproval of any position I took at the meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers or any other meetings." — From today's installment.

Fire Warning Defect Suspected in DC-6 Crash

By the United Press

Investigators are probing the possibility of a defective fire warning system in the United Air Lines DC-6 which burned and crashed in Utah Friday with the loss of 52 lives, it was learned yesterday.

The fire is believed to have originated in a baggage compartment, gained such headway that it could not be put out despite the normally hypersensitive warning and extinguishing system installed in DC-6.

DC-6 May Have Begun Falling Apart Miles Away

Richfield, Utah, Oct. 27 (U.P.).—Civil Aeronautics officials considered the possibility today that the crashed United Airlines DC-6 might have started to disintegrate some 20 miles before it crash-landed.

Some pieces of the plane's seats were reported to have been found many miles from the crash.

Tucker Announces He Will Purchase Dodge Plant

Chicago, Oct. 27 (INS).—Preston Tucker, head of the Tucker Corp., announced tonight he will purchase the Dodge-Chicago plant at midnight next Friday night.

The War Assets Administration announced in Washington last week that the plant had been leased to Tucker for 10 years for 15 million dollars.

Tucker said he is negotiating with three insurance companies to raise 30 million dollars for real property and 10 million dollars for machinery.

sponsible for Mikolajczyk, his secretary, three aides and their wives getting out of the country.

Most Poles believe Mikolajczyk will turn up in England.

It was expected left-wingers of Mikolajczyk's party would convene in the next two weeks to remodel the party along lines acceptable to the Communist-led Polish government.

Parliament opens on Wednesday and about 25 members of the Polish Peasant Party who won election last January will receive an ultimatum shortly thereafter to support the Communists or resign, some sources said.

(In London C. P. Mayhew, British undersecretary for foreign affairs, said Mikolajczyk would be given sanctuary if he goes to England.

(The United States State Department said it had no knowledge of Mikolajczyk's whereabouts.)

Poles believe Mikolajczyk eventually may turn up in the United States to carry on his battle against the Communist-led Polish government.

3 Red Legislators Arrested in Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Oct. 27 (U.P.).—Three Communist members of the Alagoas state legislature were arrested and are held incommunicado on charges of aiding the escape of convicts from a chain gang, Alagoas Gov. Silvestre Goes Monteiro reported to the Justice Department today.

The governor's report said the three congressmen exchanged shots with the police but were overpowered.

Taft Predicts Quick Action By Congress on European Aid

aid (to Europe) and both desire to remove prices as a campaign issue, there will be greater incentive to work out a solution," he said.

"The Republican party has more to fear from a price spiral than we have. They are the ones who said take off all restrictions and it will work. It hasn't worked.

Aid Comes First

"They should be willing to help evolve a plan to make it work."

By the same token, he said there wouldn't be any reason for Democrats blocking "any reasonable plan offered by the Republicans." He said you can't rule out politics "unless there is a will to it by both parties."

A reporter asked McGrath if he would like to be able to take a tax reduction record into the 1948 campaign.

"I'd like to," McGrath said. "But if I had to choose between that and saving the people of Europe from economic collapse and starvation, I would be willing to go before the people on that issue."

In his Boston interview, Taft said Congress will be able to cut taxes without impairing the foreign aid program. Whether to go ahead with a GOP tax reduction bill this fall, or wait until the regular session, is one of the questions the Senate Republican Steering Committee will decide November 14. A companion meeting of the House GOP steering group is expected to be called shortly by Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.).

On the price issue, slated for consideration by Taft's Joint Economic Committee November 14, the Ohio Republican said some prices are "too high and others are all right." He added:

"I think we should aim at a price level 50 to 60 per cent above prewar."

He said he was opposed to price control and rationing but thought rationing less objectionable than price ceilings, saying: "There are a dozen things we can do but there is no panacea."

State Group Holds 1-Minute Meeting

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—Before an audience that wasn't there, the Commission on the Reorganization of the State Government held a 1-minute public hearing today.

Not one of the customarily vocal Virginians was on hand to tell the commission how the State should run its administrative business.

Former United States Senator Thomas G. Burch called the hearing to order at 11:12 a. m. and declared it adjourned a minute later.

Postal Employes Adopt Raise Resolution

A resolution urging Congress to grant postal employes a $600 a year pay increase was adopted unanimously by the executive committe of the United National Association of Postal Clerks meeting here today.

Andrew T. Walker, president of the New York Postoffice Clerks Association, declared that families of postal clerks in the Metropolitan area are actually in want.

"In order for New York postal clerks to make ends meet they are forced to seek part time employment after hours and in so doing are impairing their health," Mr. Walker declared.

Greece Reports Heavy Fighting

Athens, Oct. 27 (AP).—Press dispatches said today that some 2000 guerillas were engaged in scattered engagements with government forces among the Pindus mountain region in western Macedonia.

Heavy fighting was reported around Metsovon, 20 miles east of Ioannina, where Greek forces were said to have routed insurgents. Correspondents said national troops were using artillery, mortars and planes.

hood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and awarded $1000 in damages to Tom Tunstall, Negro locomotive fireman on the Norfolk & Southern Railroad.

Yesterday's suit stated that for some years before the 1941 agreement "the defendant railroads and other southeastern carriers unlawfully conspired with the Brotherhood to advance the interests of the Brotherhood and to eliminate Negro locomotive firemen from lawful employment and to deprive them of their rights and property."

The Brotherhood, says the suit, accepts only white members, but serves as the bargaining agent for all.

"In furtherance of the conspiracy," the suit stated, "the defendants formed the agreement of February 18, 1941, and entered into other unlawful and secret agreements."

In 1944, the Supreme Court ruled the 1941 agreement "illegal, and in violation of the Railway Labor Act," the suit said. "Nevertheless," the suit stated, "the defendants have failed to discontinue the unlawful agreement."

Can't Become Engineers

The agreement, the plaintiffs charged, makes provisions for the rights of "promotable" firemen and exempts such rights to the "nonpromotable." "Promotable," the plaintiffs charged, "means white firemen, 'nonpromotable means Negro firemen."

The suit charged that by the agreement Negro locomotive firemen were made ineligible for promotion to engineers, and also disqualified from obtaining jobs on "the better-paid runs."

Lawson Cited for Contempt As Audience Cheers, Boos

Division of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union, is employed largely in connection with the industry's visual education for school children, Johnston said.

Thomas Criticizes Johnston

Thomas bluntly accused Johnston of failing to "cooperate" with the committee in ridding the movie industry of Communist influence.

He said "it makes me boil" to see the attempts that have been made to call off this investigation.

Some persons have "tried all the tricks of the trade," Thomas insisted, to hamper or block the investigation. And he said that certain persons "of dubious character" had communicated with the committee to keep certain persons off the stand and to prevent certain questions from being asked.

"As you know," Thomas said to Johnston, "we had a very prominent personage get in touch with us and ask us to lay off or postpone this investigation."

Some other persons, he said, approached the committee investigators and while they didn't offer anything they "gave all the signs of an offer."

Didn't Try to Stop Probe

Johnston said that no one connected with his association had tried to call off the inquiry. He added that when he found out that one witness had made a special request, he asked him to write a letter offering to appear.

"I don't propose that the Government shall tell the motion picture industry, directly or by coercion, what kind of pictures it ought to make," Johnston said.

"When I talk about freedom of speech in connection with this hearing, I mean just this: You don't need to pass a law to choke off free speech or seriously curtail it. Intimidation or coercion will do it just as well. You can't make good and honest motion pictures in an atmosphere of fear."

Substantially the same point was made at a press conference at noon by the Committee for the Preservation of the First Amendment to the Constitution.

Director John Huston and writer Philip Dunne particularly emphasized this point.

Unsettled by Lawson Row

The ruckus over Lawson, however, appeared to have spread confusion in the ranks.

Some of the luminaries said they hadn't come to Washington to defend Lawson, others said the charge of communism wasn't proved, and still others that it didn't matter whether it was or not.

Comedian Danny Kaye said Lawson had been in the position of an actor who faced an audience of 5000 all shouting, "You stink," and refusing to let him do his act.

He had reference to the fact that the committee, after Lawson was sworn in, refused to let him read a prepared statement, although other witnesses had been granted the same privilege.

After reading the statement, declared it was "not relevant."

Lawsen's statement, copies of which were distributed to the press, went along these lines:

"I feel like a man who had had truck-loads of filth heaped upon him; I am now asked to struggle to my feet and talk while more truck-loads pour more filth around my head."

Of Thomas, Lawson said:

"I am not suggesting that J. Parnell Thomas aspires to be the man on horseback. He is a petty politicia serving powerful forces. These forces are trying to introduce fascism in this country."

He was "plastered with mud," Lawson declared, because the committee does not like his opinions.

Lawson's record was put into the record by committee investigators.

After testifying to his Communist Party card, the committee read a long memorandum on his Communist and Communist front activities.

Committee records showed that on May 18, 1934, the Daily Worker, official Communist paper, identified Lawson as its own correspondent. The People's World, official West Coast Communist paper, reported on October 22, 1942, that Lawson was backing Mrs. LaRue McCormick, candidate for the California Senate on the Communist Party ticket. He was also listed in party publications as defending Brazilian Communists.

In November, 1946, Lawson was listed as a member of the editorial board of Mainstream, "Marxist Literary Quarterly," and he is also listed as a member of the editorial board of "Book Union, Inc.," Communist book-of-the-month club.

Defended Moscow Trials

In 1938, the Daily Worker listed Lawson as the signer of a statement by the "American Progressives Defending the Moscow Trials."

Records showed that Lawson followed every twist and turn of the Communist Party line, switching from the United Front of 1937 to the American Peace Mobilization when Hitler and Stalin signed their pact, and back again to the United Front when Hitler invaded Russia.

Admits Communist Aim

In an article in New Theater Magazine, November, 1934, Lawson wrote, according to the committee memorandum,

"As for myself, I do not hesitate to say that it is my aim to present the Communist position, and to do so in the most specific manner."

Lawson, author of such scripts as "Blockade," "Algiers" and "Counterattack," was the first of 19 so-called "unfriendly" witnesses to be called.

At the very outset, Robert W. Kenny, one of the counsel for the 19, asked that the subpena for Lawson and the other 18 be quashed.

The motoin was denied.

Then Bartley C. Crum, another attorney for the group, asked that last week's witnesses be recalled for cross-examination, "in order to show these witnesses lied." The motion was denied.

When Thomas ruled that Lawson was not to read his statement, the stocky script writer shouted:

"You spent last week vilifying me before the American people and now you refuse to let me read a statement."

"It is not pertinent," Thomas replied.

Answers Question Finally

"Are you a member of the Screen Writers Guild? asked Chief Investigator Stripling.

"Raising any question here regarding my membership in any organization or my political beliefs is quite beyond the scope of this committee," replied Lawson.

"Are you a member of the Screen Writers Guild?" repeated Stripling.

"Raising any question here regarding my membership in any organization or my political beliefs is quite beyond the scope of this committee, but it is matter of public record that I am a member of the Screen Writers Guild," answered the 55-year-old writer.

There was loud applause.

"I am not on trial here before this committee," Lawson shouted.

"This committee is on trial here before the American people. Let's get that straight."

Lawson was asked if he had ever held office in the Screen Writers Guild.

Again protesting, he finally said it was "a matter of public record," that he had been its first president in 1933 and had held other offices.

"Be responsive to the questions or you will be excused," cautioned Thomas.

Charges Intimidation

"I will frame my own answers," retorted Lawson.

Thomas cautioned Lawson to refrain "from making a scene," and told him, "You're no different from other witnesses."

"I am being treated different," yelled Lawson. "It is beyond the province of this committee to inquire . . ."

Thomas banged the gavel.

"This will have to stop or you will be held in contempt. You know what has happened to other witnesses who have been held in contempt of this committee."

"I am glad you made it clear you are trying to intimidate me as a witness," Lawson shot back.

After some bickering, the names of pictures on which Lawson had worked were put into the record.

"Are you a member or have you been a member of the Communist Party?" Lawson was asked.

"I must emphasize that the question is in no way related to the inquiry, which is an attempt to get control of the screen."

Invokes Bill of Rights

"Mr. Lawson this a pertinent inquiry: Are you a member of the Communist Party?"

"You are using the old technique used by Hitler in Germany in order to smear the motion picture industry and invade the rights of Americans whether they be Protestants, Catholics, Jews, Democrats, Republicans or anything else."

Bang. Bang. The gavel resounded.

"Answer the question."

". . . perjury . . . a tissue of lies . . ."

Bang. Bang. Bang.

"Answer the question."

"My rights as an American citizen . . ."

"Are you a member of the Communist Party?"

"It is unfortunate that I have to teach this committee the basic principles . . ."

"Then you refuse to answer? Stand aside."

Without leaving their chairs members of the committee unanimously decided upon a contempt citation.

If, as expected, the full committee approves, Thomas will refer the matter to the House when it reconvenes November 17.

Conviction for contempt of Congress carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail and-or $1000 fine.

set aside and declared null and void on the ground among others that the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Interior are without authority to bind the United States by agreements which it is alleged would if valid alienate and surrender the Government's paramount power over the submerged lands concerning which the stipulations are made.

"It is ordered that the petition of Robert E. Lee Jordan to file the motion here to declare the stipulations null and void be denied, without prejudice to the assertion of any right he may have in a proper district court.

"1. It is further ordered that the stipulation between the United States Attorney General and the Secretary of the Interior on the one hand and the attorney general of California on the other, which stipulations purport to bind the United States, be stricken as irrelevant to any issues now before us.

Official Court Decree

"And for the purpose of carrying into effect the conclusions of this court, as sated in its opinion announced June 23, 1947, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed as follows:

"1. The United States of America is now, and has been at all times pertinent hereto, possessed of paramount rights in, and full dominion and power over, the lands, minerals and other things underlying the Pacific Ocean lying seaward of the ordinary low-water mark on the coast of California, and outside the inland waters, extending seaward 3 nautical miles and bounded on the north and south, respectively, by the northern and southern boundaries of the State of California. The State of California has no title thereto or property interests therein.

"2. The Uinted States is entitled to the injunction relief prayed for in the complaint.

"3. Jurisdiction is reserved by this court to enter such further orders and to issue such writs as may from time to time be deemed advisable or necessary to give full force and effect to this decree."

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman met the court's language with a statement in which he said the Government and the State, "although filing the stipulations in the case, has not asked the court to take any action with respect to them, and the statement by the court is not to be construed as affecting their validity or in any manner changing their, status."

"The stipulations remain in full force and effect," Perlman added.

Perlman pointed out that the court denied Jordon's effort to have the stipulations declared void, but he did not speak of the court's action on the motion of Attorney Norman M. Littell, who attacked the Krug-Clark deal as a citizen and a member of the court's bar.

The court received Littell's statement calling the court's attention to important facts about the stipulations which he said were not mentioned by counsel for the Government or the State.

Contrary, He Contends

Littell told the court no decree ought to be entered which approved or condoned the stipulations, because they were contrary to the court decision that the Government owns the oil land.

Littell added that the Attorney General had no lawful power to make the deal with California, and that the clause limiting what the Government could collect left the Government at the mercy of the operating practices of the oil business. It is common, he said last night, for "costs" to come to more than the value of the crude oil.

This makes no difference to the oil firms, because they make their profit on refining and selling gasoline—and hundreds of other oil products. But it would make a difference of hundreds of millions of dollars to the Treasury, he said.

Attorney General Tom C. Clark dwelt on the oil decree, and the throwing out of the stopulations, in Boston, where he was making a speech before the National Association of Attorneys General. Clark made a point of saying that he was a States' rights man.

Federal oil lands like those off the California coast are under the Interior Department.

"We will now get up recommendations to Congress," the Attorney General said, "as to how this property shall be managed and operated. I have no doubt that President Truman also will make some recommendations, though not to the special session, which will be too busy."

Congress, said Clark, must decide whether to ask for an accounting for the oil and gas that have bee ntaken from its land, and also whether to save the coast oil as a war reserve or allow it to be drawn out by operators right away.

Jane Anderson Cleared in Treason Case

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Treason indictments against Jane Anderson and two others who broadcast propoganda from Germany during the war, were dismissed in District Court yesterday upon recommendation of the Department of Justice.

Cleared besides Miss Anderson were Edward Leo Delaney of Olney, Ill., and Max Otto Koischwitz, formerly of New York. The latter died in Berlin in 1944, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The indictments were dismissed by Associate Justice David A. Pine after Assistant United States Attorney John Conliff told the court that the Department of Justice wanted the case against Miss Anderson dropped because "the requisite number of witnesses to overt acts cannot be produced and because of the nature of her broadcast material."

Raymond P. Whearty, head of the Internal AL Security section of the Department of Justice said: "Some of her stuff was much like material that had been printed in some American newspapers during the war.

"She was violently anti-Communist, having received rough treatment at the hands of Communists when she was in Spain during the civil war, but there was nothing that we could put our finger on as actually reasonable."

(The indictment returned July 26, 1943 charged Miss Anderson with having tried to persuade Americans not to support the war, with broadcasting that "selected officials of the United States were secret representatives of Russia" and with stating that the Nazis were fighting for "religious freedom and social justice." She was also charged with declaring in broadcasts beamed to the United States that Germany was invincible and that Jews and not the Japanese destroyed the Pearl Harbor vessels.)

Brazilian Senate Votes to Oust All Communist Legislators

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 27 (INS).—The Brazilian Senate voted tonight to oust all Communist legislators, State and Federal, by cancelling their mandates.

The motion was aimed at Senator Luiz Carloz Prestes, leader of the Communist party, 18 members of the Chamber of Deputies and 500 state and municipal officeholders throughout Brazil.

The action also would remove large Communist minorities in the Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo city councils.

The Communist party already has been deprived of its electoral registration in Brazil. Last week Brazil severed diplomatic relations with Russia because of alleged interference in its domestic affairs.

Tonight's vote was 35 to 19. The Senate must vote on the motion again. Then it goes to the Chamber of Deputies where its passage is assured.

London, Oct. 27 (AP).—Herbert Morrison, deputy prime minister, rejected a suggestion today that the House of Commons establish a committee "on un-British activities" similar to the United States Committee on Un-American Activities.

Sir Waldron Smithers, a Conservative, made the suggestion. "The answer," Morrison replied, "is no, sir."

Food Council Hears Warnings of Famine

person who had eggs and bacon for breakfast was consuming the equivalent of 41 to 42 slices of bread. Each egg, he said, represented eight slices of bread—and each slice of bacon six slices.

(Anderson's figures were based on an Agriculture Department estimate that it takes 8 ounces of grain to produce an egg, and 5½ ounces to produce 1 ounce of pork.)

"President Truman asked that each American save a slice of bread each day," Anderson declared, pointing out that would amount to only one-forty-second part of an ordinary breakfast.

Anderson warned of the danger to the world food supply and the Marshall Plan in the drought now threatening the winter wheat crop in the Southwest.

The meeting was one of several held here by the Advertising Council, which aided in many campaigns during the war and in the postwar period since.

Notables Are Guests

Among the guests were Winthrop W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank of New York; Henry Ford 2d, Roy Howard, newspaper publisher; Former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York; Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board, The Washington Post; Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Paul G. Hoffman, president, Studebaker Corp; A. E. Lyon, Railway Labor Executives Association; Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary and Reece Taylor, Union Oil Co.

Speakers included Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of Commerce Harriman, Willard Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs; John J. McCloy, president of the World Bank, and John Steelman, assistant to the President.

Led by the American delegate, Agriculture Secretary Anderson, the IEFC voted to ask the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization to postpone transfer of IEFC world food allocating powers to the FAO Council, now scheduled for December 31, until June 30 next year.

Would Transfer Machinery

The IEFC also asked that FAO provide the answer to a series of requests that much of the machinery of IEFC be taken over by FAO when the transfer is effected. These concerned, chiefly, the trained staff of IEFC and the commodity groups set up by FitzGerald in that organization. These groups study various commodities in short supply, and recommend their allocations to needy countries.

No mention was made for continuing the services of Dr. FitzGerald as allocations chief. FitzGerald's work, however, was highly praised by many delegates.

After preparing its proposals to the FAO the IEFC voted to adjourn until after the FAO food council meets here November 5. IEFC then will reconvene to receive a reply to its questions.

Could Result in Chaos

In his report, FitzGerald warned that the twin problems of food and dollar shortages abroad could result in world "economic collapse," if not "chaos."

Per capita food supplies for this year, ending next June 30, he said, will be 2 or 3 per cent below last year's level, and nearly 10 per cent below prewar production.

The report emphasized that the change from prewar levels of food consumption was not uniform. Supplies this year vary from as much as 30 per cent below prewar to in some countries, to 15 per cent above.

FitzGerald said food consumption is highest in the United States and Argentina, and lowest in parts of Europe and Asia.

He declared that there is little prospect that the world can work its way out of its food difficulties, particularly in grain, for years.

Contract Suit Filed Against Distillery

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 27 (AP).—First court action here against President Truman's Citizens Food Committee's conservation program was filed today in Jefferson Circuit Court to contest the shutdown of a Kentucky distillery for the 60-day distillers' holiday.

The Heaven Hill Co., a sales agency for the whisky of that name, filed suit against the Heaven Hill distillery of Bardstown, Ky., to force delivery of 179 barrels of whisky a day as provided in a contract between the two corporations.

The petition asserts that not even the President has power to invalidate a contract between the plaintiff and the distillery.

Va. Plans 'Fences' To Stop Snow Drifts on Roads

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—The State Highway Department made public today a plan for the construction of "living snow fences" in those parts of the State where drifting snow creates difficult raffic problems in winter months.

Cooperative agreements are being worked out with landowners, the department said, for the planting of trees and shrubs where such barriers will be effective in preventing excessive drifting of snow onto highways. This planting must be done well back of the highway right-of-way, it was explained, and contracts must be made for the State to enter on private property and plant such low-limbed trees and shrubs as design engineers feel would be helpful.

Rural landowners who would like to participate in the planting program may apply to the department at any time from now on, the department said.

Inflation Helps Employment, Says U. S. Paper

Inflation is helping to keep down joblessness, the Federal Reserve Board bulletin said yesterday.

"As long as inflationary pressures continue strong there is little likelihood that unemployment will increase greatly," the board's monthly publication said in an article analyzing "the current labor market."

But it also said that, "pressures for wage increases are likely to continue unless living costs are stabilized or reduced," because "continued advances in prices, particularly in food prices, are placing increasing pressure on the living standards of many workers."

About 1,500,000 more persons are working or looking for work than had been anticipated on the basis of prewar trends, but they are concentrated in the 14-19 age group and in women over 35 and men over 55.

Employment in domestic service, which declined throughout the war and early postwar period, has "increased sharply since mid-1946 and is currently nearly 300,000 higher than a year ago.

Oct. 29 Is Va. Deadline For Absentee Ballots

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—Applications for absentee ballots in the November 4 elections may be honored through Wednesday, October 29, but none should be accepted by election officials after midnight of that day, the State Board of Elections said today.

A bulletin sent to all election officials by Levin Nock Davis, secretary of the State Board, cited the State law which says that applications for absentee ballots must be made not more than 60 days nor less than five days prior to the election date. Thus, the board calculated, the last day for filing such requests is October 29.

Mountbatten Home

Honeymoon Nest Loaned Royal Pair

London, Oct. 27 (AP).—Lieut. Philip Mountbatten has borrowed a home from his uncle in which to start his honeymoon with Princess Elizabeth, Buckingham Palace disclosed tonight.

After the wedding on November 20 the couple will go to spacious Broadlands, home of Lord and Lady Mountbatten near the ancient Norman town of Romsey in Hampshire.

The second part of the honeymoon—the length of which was not disclosed—will be spent in Birkhall, an ivy-covered residence near the royal palace in Balmoral, Scotland.

Meanwhile, the Evening Standard's "woman correspondent" declared Elizabeth "will have a trousseau fit for a princess after all," and gave these details:

"It will be a beautiful collection of misty blue, pink and white chiffons and silks, heavily trimmed with real old lace, satin ribbons and exquisite hand embroidery.

"One of the most romantic items is a lovely tea gown. Many ensembles of nightgown, negligee, bed jacket, and cami-knickers are included. Hyacinth, blue, periwinkle blue, shell and flesh pinks are some of the shades chosen by the princess."

Wedding invitations have been mailed to some 2000 of the elect.

Woman Held As Drunk, Dies At Gallinger

A 20-year-old woman, arrested for intoxication, died yesterday in Gallinger Hospital.

She was listed as Martha Jones, alias Blanche Jones, 20, of 911 W st. nw. She was arrested Saturday morning in an alley near her home, transferred from the Women's Bureau to Gallinger Hospital at 2:15 that afternoon, and died at 4 a. m. yesterday, police said.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of death by natural causes, specifically a cerebral hemorrhage.

Her death was the fourth among persons arrested for intoxication in the Washington area in little more than a week. It was the first death reported in the new alcoholic clinic at Gallinger.

At Gallinger, Miss Jones was treated for alcoholism, the police reported, by Dr. Doiald Anderson. She was pronounced dead by Dr. R. L. Whetton of the hospital staff.

The homicide squad investigated the case.

Zlotnick Fur Store Manager Sued For Divorce Here

Mrs. Rebecca Zlotnick, 37, former ballet dancer who married the manager of Zlotnick the Furrier after four months as a saleswoman fur store, charg in the G st. nw. fur store, charged him with several acts of cruelty as she sued for divorce in District Court yesterday.

Mrs. Zlotnick

Zlotnick, whose father is proprietor of the fur store, did not give her a wedding ring for 6 months after their marriage in June, 1943, she testified, and even then, she added, she had to buy it herself and have the bill sent to him.

Though asserting that she didn't have lunch money on many occasions and several times was forced to wire her parents in New York for funds, the former $75 a week saleswoman said she "wouldn't dispute" that Zlotnick had given her checks totalling $10,000 during their two years together.

Publicists Hear World Trade Talk

The Marshall Plan reemphasizes the need for balanced world trade, Evans Clark, executive director of the Twentieth Century Fund, yesterday told the American Public Relations Association meeting at the Hamilton Hotel.

"In the long run," Clark declared, "loans and grants to European nations will be completely futile unless we are willing to buy more of their goods, when they get back on their feet."

be no material change in the handling of the alcoholics. What I mean is, we have not and, therefore, cannot offer facilities for the person who is drunk to sleep it off at Gallinger."

Major Barrett said, "This is not the issue here. The policemen of Washington are very well trained to handle drunks . . . it is the case of the man who may be injured in addition to having been drinking heavily where the problem arises."

Dr. Ruhland said 25 drunks were sent to Gallinger Hospital over the weekend in the first application of the new Police Department policy for the handling of alcoholics.

Rock Will Stop Bus But It's an Expensive Way

Tossing a rock can be an effective but expensive way of stopping a bus, James F. Colein, 47, of 1668 Trinidad ave. ne., discovered yesterday.

After watching five buses, pass him by as he waited at what he thought was a bus stop on the District side of Highway Bridge, Colein declared he "got good and mad."

So he hurled a rock at the sixth, an Arnold bus, operated by Roland Sutherland of 6 West Maple st., Alexandria, and hit the shatter-proof windshield.

Sutherland drew up, despite the fact it was not a bus stop, took Colein aboard and brought him into the terminal and Municipal Court, on a charge of destroying private property.

Judge Walter J. Casey continued the case to Friday to give Colein time to pay the Arnold Lines $17, the cost of the windshield.

NLRB States Policy On Its Backlog Cases

Won't Force Employer to Bargain Unless Union Is Eligible Under New Labor Act

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board said yesterday that it won't force an employer to bargain with a union in a case dating back before the Taft-Hartley labor law unless the union is eligible to use the board's machinery.

In order to become eligible, union leaders must swear they are not Communists and must submit financial and organizational data to the Labor Department as required by the Taft-Hartley Act.

The board's order yesterday was the first issued on a backlog of unfair labor practice cases which were started prior to August 22, when the new act became fully operative.

Pending are 225 unfair labor practice cases which were heard before August 22 and are awaiting decision. The ruling, therefore, has widespread significance.

The Marshall and Bruce Co., Nashville, Tenn., was ordered to bargain with the AFL Bookbinders Union, if officers of the latter sign the non-Communist affidavits and otherwise comply with the act in 30 days.

Chairman Paul M. Herzog, members James J. Reynolds, jr., and J. Copeland Gray issued the 3 to 2 majority decision on the Tennessee case. All five members agreed that the board has the power to dispose of the cases pending before the new law became operative and to remedy any unfair labor practices which existed before that time.

Members John M. Houston and Abe Murdock contended that the bargaining order in the Marshall and Bruce Co. case should not be conditioned on union compliance or noncompliance with the Taft-Hartley Act.

The majority said it believes "that to direct the respondent to bargain with the union and thus, in effect, to place the union in the position of a newly certified bargaining representative, would not effectuate the policies of the act, unless and until it qualifies for certification under section 9 (F), and (G) and (H) within a reasonable time."

"Although the present proceeding does not involve the actual certification of a bargaining representative," the majority continued, "an order requiring an employer to bargain collectively with a labor organization is often tantamount in practice to a certification of the latter as bargaining representative. It looks toward a future relationship."

CAB Asks U.S. to Help Finance Transport Plane Designers

By the United Press

The Civil Aeronautics Board proposed yesterday that the Federal Government grant financial aid to aircraft companies which ahe trying to develop new transport planes.

In a statement to President Truman's Air Policy Commission, CAB Chairman James M. Landis said that subsidized development of new planes was necessary to keep the United States in the forefront of international air competition.

He said the present large transport designs—the Lockheed Constellation, the Douglas DC-6 and the Boeing Strato-Cruiser—are able to handle immediate aviation needs, but "it is by no means too early to start development work on a successor to these craft.

Opposes Stand-By Fleet

Landis said he was opposed to suggestions that the Federal Government maintain a fleet of large transports for emergency use. He pointed out that future military needs are unknown, and that the Government would have no use for such a stand-by fleet in peacetime.

He proposed the Federal subsidy be administered by a joint military-civilian agency. He said the Government should be able to "recapture" part of the funds it advanced when the new planes are sold to commercial airlines.

Wants Wider Power

Landis also proposed that:

1. The CAB be given the power to revoke—as well as grant—route authorization to airlines. He said this would help the board keep the national air-route system up to date.

2. The CAB be given complete jurisdiction over the fiancial structure of airlines.

3. Multiple taxation of airlines by the States be eleminated by Federal legislation.

4. The Federal Government be given the right to regulate international air rates.

Landis described as a "grave impediment" to the development of aviation the "growing tendency of the States to assert economic regulatory jurisdiction over carriers subject to Federal control."

Justice Dept. Adds to Civil Rights Staff

Boston, Oct. 27 (AP).—Attorney Gen. Tom C. Clark said today he was enlarging the civil rights section of the United States Department of Justice as the result of a petition to the United Nations for redress of grievances by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Clark said he felt "humiliated" that any group of Americans should feel that they had to go before the international body for redress. Speaking at the forty-first annual meeting of the National Association of Attorneys General, Clark said:

"Our failure to live up to our high phrases is used to mock us in the battle between freedom and tyranny which occupies the world today."

No Act Unobserved

He warned that "no act of accidental injustice, let alone those of calculation, will go unobserved by our enemies. Lip service to our ideals will be seen for the mockery that it is."

Speaking of the petition, he said he was "humiliated" that there should be the slightest foundation for such a petition and that the association could conclude that among all of our honorable institutions there was no tribunal to which such a petition could be presented with hope of redress.

"I feel very deeply the obligation which rests upon me and upon the great department of the Government which I head to do everything which is possible to secure to every citizen the rights of citizenship which are unquestionably his.

"To this end the civil rights unit of the Department of Justice is being enlarged and strengthened. In those instances where the States through negligence, or for whatever reason, fail in their obligation to protect the life and liberties of the individual citizen, we shall move with as great vigor and force as is permitted under the law."

Democratic Convention Narrows to 2 Cities

Choice of a 1948 Democratic National Convention site has narrowed down pretty much to either Philadelphia or San Francisco, Senator J. Howard McGrath (R. I.), chairman-designate of the Democratic National committee, said yesterday.

McGrath said he didn't care to discuss detailed bids because "we are still negotiating." He ruled out Chicago and New York. A formal decision will be reached by the National committee at a meeting here tomorrow.

Bishop Sees Church Gaining in Germany

Dibelius Says Religion, Despite Concern With Bare Living Needs, Is Progressing

The German church is slowly winning back ground lost during the Nazi regime, Dr. Otto Dibelius, Bishop of Berlin and Brandenburg for the German Evangelical Church, said here yesterday.

Dr. Dibelius

"Though the people are so concerned with the problems of food and shelter that they don't have much time to think of spiritual things, the church is making some progress," the elderly bishop said.

"In Germany we have started bringing together scientists, professors and others to discuss religious problems from the standpoint of their particular fields," he said, "and more and more are coming back to religious attitudes."

He said 50 per cent of the churches were destroyed or damaged too much for immediate use as meeting places.

Bishop Dibelius, who was imprisoned and finally acquitted of treason charges during the Nazi regime, is visiting the United States at the invitation of the Evangelical and Reformed Church and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Part of the bishop's program yesterday included an off-the-record address at the Ministerial Union luncheon at Columbia Heights Christian Church.

A panel discussion of the church's role in present world conditions, in which five clergymen who visited Europe this past summer participated, proceded the luncheon. Participants included: The Revs. Fred S. Buschmeyer, moderator; Robert M. Williams, Edward H. Pruden, J. M. Dawson and Frederick E. Reissig.

ABC Takes Case On Proprietor Under Advisement

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday took under advisement charges that the ABC Act was violated by Henry G. Thompson, operator of a restaurant at 3514 12th st. ne.

Robert D. Wise, assistant corporation counsel, charged that Thompson had violated the act by selling beer to an intoxicated person, by allowing the persons to remain in the place, and by allowing a person to drink beer while standing.

Thompson denied the charges. He said he did not see the woman alleged to have been drunk in his restaurant.

A pictorial demonstration of a practical reason for counting mosquitos won first place yesterday in the first international competition of scientific photography, held at the Smithsonian Institution.

One of the 250 black and white photographs submitted by scientists from all over the world, the picture, taken by Dr. Edwin R. Willis, research assistant at Ohio State University, shows how female mosquitos are attracted to the odor of man. Reason for the picture was to enable Dr. Willis to count the mosquitos.

Counting mosquitos is necessary to determine the most effective of several repellents under consideration, since the mosquitos will leave the area where there is the most offensive preparation.

Sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution and Scientific Monthly magazine, the competition was designed to develop and extend the use of photography as a basic research tool.

Winner in the color division of 125 entries was a picture taken by Mr. Thomas C. Coulter, associate director of the Armour Research Foundation, showing the explosion of several Monroe effect bombs simultaneously. The bombs, used against submarines, can penetrate 23 inches of armor steel.

The pictures will be displayed in the northwest gallery of the Institute, starting Saturday for one month.

Kashmir Joins India to Halt Pathan Attack

New Delhi, Oct. 27 (AP).—Hindu India announced today the accession of predominantly Moslem Kashmir, princely state in the extreme northern part of the subcontinent.

The accession followed an appeal from the Hindu Maharajah of Kashmir, Sir Hari Singh, who said "I have no option but to ask help from the Indian Dominion."

Detachments of a battalion of 1600 Sikhs today flew to Spinagar, Kashmir's capital, met 2000 invading Pathan tribesmen about 30 miles from the capital and "stopped them."

Kashmir, one of the largest Indian princely states, occupies a strategic location on the northern approaches to the subcontinent.

Details of the accession were not known, although the instrument was said to be substantially the same as that signed by a majority of the 500 other states, giving the Dominion of India control over foreign affairs, defense and communication.

A spokesman indicated the drive on the Maharajah's panic-stricken capital was halted at Baramula, an entrance to the famous Vale of Kashmir.

B. L. Batra, Kashmir's deputy prime minister, has charged that the raiders, joined by rebel Moslems within the state, included soldiers on leave from Pakistan's army.

The Pakistan government said 5000 Moslem refugees had left Kashmir for Parkistan because of oppression.

Fire Evacues Straggle Back; Blazes Halted

Portland, Me., Oct. 27 (AP).—Weary refugees from Maine's worst forest fire disaster straggled homeward today, many to piles of ashes, after more than a week of forest blazes in which the area counted 22 dead and 32 million dollars property damage.

All fires were under control, but guard was kept lest high winds start flames on a new rampage.

The first contingent of male evacuees returned to Bar Harbor, where many magnificent estates were leveled.

Authorities slashed red tape to provide housing. Prefabricated metal buildings—150 of them—are en route from Syracuse, N. Y.

To step up flow of materials to Maine, which has been declared a disaster area by President Truman, the War Assets Administration set up headquarters at Augusta, the capital.

Not until Bar Harbor restores a semblance of order will womenfolk and children be permitted to return. A crew was ready to start erecting housing tomorrow.

Northeast Harbor, which escaped the full wrath of the flames, received 700 returning men, women and children.

In Lyman, Tax Collector John Elliott said, "We'll never rebuild."

Arson probes are under way. In Washington, Senator Brewster (R., Me.) said he was suggesting to the FBI that it look for evidence of deliberate destruction in both the costly New England forest fires and Friday's Utah plane crash.

Greece Seen Saved From Reds' Ax by Presence of U. S. Fleet

Baltimore, Oct. 27 (AP).—Rear Adm. W. L. Ainsworth, fifth naval district commandant, told a Navy Day luncheon audience today that the reason the Russian "ax" hasn't fallen on Greece is because of the presence of an American fleet in the Mediterranean.

"It is even possible that some of (Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y.) Vishinsky's most violent protestations have been inspired by the futility of his words against that potent argument, Ainsworth said.

The officer stressed the need for maintenance of an adequate military and naval force, adding:

"Russia-dominated Eurasia today may be likened to a grass or forest fire creeping ever outward with darting tongues of flame seeking to consume all where resistance is weakest.

"At this moment the hottest spots on the perimeter are Korea, Manchuria, Mongolia, Indo-China, India, Asia Minor, Turkey and Greece.

"The only way to put the fire out is to stamp it out with force. Every force we possess—with armed might and economic pressure abroad, yes—but most of all with iron determination and the real spirit of true Americans at home."

Keep Navy Powerful, Top Officers Urge

By The Associated Press

Top naval officers told the Nation yesterday that the United States must maintain a powerful Navy to defend American foreign policy and American freedoms "whenever and wherever they are challenged."

Direct and indirect references to Russia and the encroachments of communism marked the series of Navy Day addresses in cities from coast to coast.

Speaking at New Orleans, Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan declared that since VJ-Day this country's military, naval and air strength has been pared down to "a shadow" of its wartime might and that demobilization has "put the major part of our fleet in 'mothballs.'"

The result, he said, has been that United States representatives in the United Nations Council have found their tasks "increasingly difficult."

"There are forces loose in the world today which are inimical to our Government and to our way of life—forces whose ideologies are at cross purposes with the democratic processes of peace-loving people.

"The time has come when we must count it a privilege to be among those who would be as bold in the pursuit of peace as we were daring in our recent months of battle for survival."

Halsey Sounds Warning

At Birmingham, Ala., Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey sounded a warning against American unpreparedness as the "No. 1 threat to our security and to the peace of the world."

Declaring he had seen this country enter two wars unprepared, Halsey asked: "Are we fool enough to go to sleep for the third time?"

Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet, declared at Indianapolis that economic help alone may save Europe from communism but "we must never forget that aggressors understand armed strength better than any other argument."

"The liberties of free men everywhere are threatened by an insidious and stifling ideology of despair called communism," Blandy said.

Bus Line Signs Wage Agreement

Cleveland, Oct. 27 (AP).—A new wage agreement calling for increases ranging up to 1/5-cent per mile for drivers and 10 cents hourly for maintenance and terminal workers has been signed by Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines and AFL unionists, Greyhound President S. R. Sundstrom reported today.

The agreement, retroactive to October 16, affected some 2000 members of the AFL-Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor-Coach Employes working for Greyhound, Sundstrom said. Settlement of contract clauses was reached after two weeks of negotiations between company and union officials.

Major Tax Leak

Apparently the increase in the number of delinquents on the tax rolls of the District does not mean a rebellion against local taxes so much as it reflects increased activity on the part of local tax collectors. The number of delinquents shot up from 2000 in 1939 to 10,000 this year. But most of these cases involve failure to pay personal property taxes and were uncovered by the District assessor's house-to-house survey. Local officials are to be commended for this extra effort to collect some two million dollars owed the District in delinquent taxes. The pity is that they can do nothing to stop the loss of revenue from the major leak in our tax system—a leak that has the approval of Congress.

Under the personal income tax law in effect here until last July about 120,000 returns were filed. It is estimated that at least 250,000 persons living in the District have incomes large enough to be taxed under the law if Congress had not given a blanket exemption to those who retain a domicile in the States. In other words, income taxes have been collected from fewer than one half of the local residents who ought to have been paying them. Instead of correcting this inequitable law, as local authorities and the District Committees requested, Congress last July widened the inequities by decreeing that no Federal employe living here need pay a District income tax on his Government salary if he declares himself to be domiciled in a State where he has previously had a legal domicile. This is virtually a blanket exemption for Government employes, although other persons living here and claiming to be legally domiciled in one of the States have to pay the tax.

We doubt that any tax bill passed by an American legislature has ever embodied a more raw discrimination than this one. It means that of two brothers who came to Washington at the same time, and retained the same tie with their former home, one working for the Government is exempt from the District income tax and the other, working for a private company, must pay it. In our opinion, the people of the District should never acquiesce in such injustice. The fight for amendment or repeal of this law ought to be carried to Congress every year until this gross abuse of arbitrary power has been corrected.

Exit Mikolajczyk

The only thing to be said at this moment concerning the flight of Stanislaw Mikolajczyk from Warsaw is that we hope it is true. It has long been known that if Mikolajczyk remained in Poland he must sooner or later go the way of Mihailovich in Yugoslavia, Petkov in Bulgaria, and other Balkan fighters for freedom, possibly including Maniu of Romania, postponement of whose trial makes us think that he has already joined the other martyrs. From the moment Mikolajczyk was permitted to return to his native country in return for British and American approval of the admission of Poland to the United Nations, Mikolajczyk's position there has been that of hostage. As long as the Communist leaders had hope of continued appeasement in their every demand, his life was fairly safe. When the American policy of attempting to purchase agreement by concession was abandoned, Mikolajczyk still obtained some protection from the great popular favor and passive support he obtained as the symbol of resistance to the totalitarian rule and perhaps also from the existence of the "green revolutionaries."

The Communist censorship has permitted very little to escape concerning these "green revolutionaries," and there is no way of telling whether they ever constituted anything more than a minor nuisance to the Red overlords. They appear to have been outlaw bands comprised partly of Poles and partly of deserters from the Red army who had taken refuge in the great evergreen forests, from which they occasionally emerged for raids and surprise attacks on supply centers. They are said to have represented themselves as a resistance movement on the pattern of the Chetniks, and, as such, allies of Mikolajczyk's Polish Peasant Party. How far their purposes were political and how far a mere desperate struggle to evade capture and extermination is not clear. But they are said to have shown the Communists no more mercy than they could have expected from them.

Not long ago the Communists, applying their familiar tactics, succeeded in dividing the Peasant Party into two factions, and they have since done the same with what is left of the Polish Socialist Party. In each case they have created a "left wing" which has announced its intention to support and collaborate with the government and which may be counted upon in all things to follow the Communist Party line. It is a suspicious circumstance that the announcement of Mikolajczyk's disappearance comes from leaders of the Communist-dominated wing of the Peasant Party. The story is that he has left the country with two of his associates and their families. As far as it goes, this report is doubtless true. What we must wait to see is whether it means that they have been deported to Russia or whether they will turn up presently on this side of the iron curtain. We fervently hope that this latter will be the case, for Mikolajczyk, by common consent of those who saw him and talked with him in Washington in 1943, is one of the great men of our times. Surely there is some way of rescuing such men in Eastern Europe from Soviet clutches.

Building Wages

Mayor O'Dwyer has renewed his appeal to labor and management representatives of New York City's building industry to enter into a wage-stabilization agreement. Frequent upward revisions of wage rates in the building industry have, as the mayor points out, made it necessary for contractors to pad their estimates, with the result of adding to the already exorbitant cost of new construction. With New York City in need of new schools, hospitals and other public facilities, the municipality's construction program is obviously being retarded by uncertainty regarding the labor cost of such undertakings. We doubt, however, whether any building-wage-stabilization agreement that might possibly be reached in response to Mayor O'Dwyer's urging would be worth the paper on which the terms of the contract were written. For the pressure for wage increases is bound to increase and is virtually certain to become irresistible, if inflationary rises in living costs are not checked.

One of the most serious and inevitable consequences of inflation is that it delays and often makes impossible the execution of long-range capital projects involving heavy money expenditures, because not only labor costs but other material costs have to be constantly revised. Consequently those who invest for profit often find the risks of new enterprises excessive and postpone desirable and essential undertakings. In the case of municipalities and other governmental bodies, whose outlays are not made for profit, the deterrent factor is the money limitation on expenditures that compels abandonment of some planned projects and, for reasons of economy, leads to the deferment of all but the most essential capital outlays during periods of inflation. While sympathizing with Mayor O'Dwyer, therefore, we greatly doubt whether he will succeed in his well-meant effort to stabilize the wages of a particular group of organized workers at a time when the forces of inflation are rampant.

Straus Memorial

President Truman's fitting tribute to Oscar Straus at the dedication of the Straus Memorial Fountain here Sunday must be considered as more than a deserved honor to a distinguished citizen who served the United States. It was, in a sense, a tribute to all the immigrants who have contributed to American greatness, not by accident of birth but because they deliberately chose to identify their destinies with this Nation. In this larger context President Truman's plea for admission of displaced persons was eminently in keeping with the significance of the occasion. For Oscar Straus, Ambassador to Turkey under three Presidents and over a long span of years, and member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague until his death in 1926, was himself a displaced person of the last century. As well as any one man, he epitomized the talents that present-day DPs may have to offer to the country that gives them haven.

The Straus Memorial—which, incidentally, we are glad to see for more reasons than one, since it gracefully fills a space that has long been an eyesore on Fourteenth street—is the culmination of a move started after a poll taken in 1929 which named Straus as the American Jew who most deserved to be honored with a statue in Washington. His position as a Jew is incidental to that honor, however, just as the question of Jews among the DPs is incidental to the problem itself. As a matter of fact, contrary, to a general impression, Jews account for only about 20 per cent of the 400,000 displaced persons who would be admitted to this country under the Stratton bill for which President Truman spoke. If the Straus Memorial is to serve as a monument to "tolerance and reason," then it also must serve as a reminder of the fundamental inconsistency in paying homage to Oscar Straus as an individual while maintaining a deaf ear to the things he stood for.

De Gaulle: Actionist

Whatever may be said about the timing, De Gaulle's call for a dissolution of the French Assembly may be shrewd as it certainly is honest. It is honest because the Fourth Republic is run by a government that has ceased to be representative even of a substantial minority. France is divided between Communist and non-Communist, yet the government is centrist, being a coalition between Socialists and Popular Republicans (MRP). Parties, in other words, have given place to camps. Nor was there any need of municipal elections to demonstrate this indubitable fact. It became patent when Paul Ramadier last June purged his cabinet of its five Communist members. "From now on," we commented at the time, "the real struggle in France will be conducted outside the government, outside even the Assembly, and the government indeed may be reduced to the role of onlooker."

So it proved. When the municipal elections came around, 40 per cent of the electorate voted for a movement, the Rally of the French People, that is not even a party, for a man, viz., De Gaulle, who holds no office, and who has no following in the Assembly. The situation is so involved, if not absurd, that even Frenchmen find difficulty in understanding it. If long continued, it would make a mockery out of parliamentary democracy, and leave the Assembly in a position like Mohammed's coffin, situated between heaven and earth. De Gaulle's move brings him out of the shadows, where (in the light of his triumph at the polls) he could have pulled the strings of government, and, unless civil war breaks out, may clarify the political situation. And there is enough economic chaos in France without adding political chaos to it.

But the de Gaulle move is, also, a very shrewd one, especially for a man who is said to be without any political gifts. Two years ago De Gaulle stepped out of public life in protest against the adoption of the present constitution, which, in his opinion, neither corresponded with present needs nor profited from past mistakes. At the time we felt he was right. Not least of the weaknesses of that constitution is the inelastic provision relating to a dissolution when the Assembly becomes unrepresentative. So afraid were the constitution-makers of a strong executive that the President cannot dissolve the chamber. This is done by the Assembly itself after a certain time-limit, in the present case next May, and then only with a two-thirds majority. Hence, in order that the Assembly may be dissolved before May, the constitution must first be altered so as to give a dissolution power to the president. One procedure is for the Assembly, by a simple majority vote, to remit the necessary amendment to the people, and, if they agree, then the change is automatically in effect, and a dissolution could then be ordered by the President. Surely in the light of the present impasse, the weakness of the constitution of the Fourth Republic is demonstrable. It is probably De Gaulle's aim, through his present move, to press home this weakness till the need for change springs to French eyes.

It is partly for his attitude toward the constitution that De Gaulle is called a potential dictator. The premises give not the slightest substance to the charge. De Gaulle, if he had had the ambition, could have become a dictator as soon as France had been liberated. At least he could have forced acceptance of his ideas of a constitution. No single instance can be advanced of De Gaulle action that proves him to have the desire of a dictator. On the contrary, he has hitherto shown himself wedded to legalistic forms. Those proponents of parliamentary democracy who are afraid of his demand for a strong second chamber and a strong executive remember the France of the last century but forget the France of the 30's. Nowhere were the evils of extreme parliamentarism manifested more than in prewar France. In words that his British countrymen, who are now invited to emasculate their second chamber, might well ponder, Bryce pointed out these evils. A generation ago he warned of the paralyzing consequences of the fragmentation of parties, the instability of cabinets, the "pitiful" weakness of the executive, the way the group system engenders intrigue. All these weaknesses were found in the Third Republic. They were carried over bodily to the Fourth. How much more fortunate are we with our American system of a "balanced republic." And that is all that De Gaulle wanted—as George Washington did over a century and a half ago.

But it is not only his attitude on the constitution that has subjected him to the suspicion of dictatorial designs. His personality has had something to do with it. He has endowed his cause with a mystique which offends such scientific rationalists as the Socialist leader, Leon Blum. He is so rigid that he made enemies right and left among the wartime Allies. Winston Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt cordially disliked him. Their attitude still lingers in the foreign offices in London and Washington, and the officials there must be watching the turn of events in Paris with wryness—wryness compounded not only of puzzlement over what may be an imminent problem of working with De Gaulle, but also of vexation that their repeated prognostications that he was through have been falsified.

Without pretending to figure out De Gaulle, or going bail for him, we can understand his position. De Gaulle had to be unbending as well as mystical in restoring French faith in France. When the invasion of North Africa was launched, our country worked with Frenchmen who were either former collaborationists or members of the old school of the militarily incompetent and the psychologically defeated. With neither of these elements could De Gaulle compromise. For he knew that compromise would have been fatal to the regeneration of France. The crisis of leadership in pre-armistice France was so profound that no country threw up such a body of collaborationists among its prewar leaders as did France. Accordingly, when we could no longer balk at the fact of Gaullist supremacy, De Gaulle cleaned the Augean stables that were in danger of becoming part of the North African landscape under our own aegis.

The fact that many of the following of the great liberal leader in France, Herriot, are now ranged on De Gaulle's side is surely proof that they consider De Gaulle the only hope of bringing order out of chaos in France without the loss of the liberties of France. Nobody can say whether, in view of the Communist commitment to sabotage, that hope will be given a chance. It is a critical hour for France—and the western world.

Federal Salaries

We have discussed the article of Mr. Clarke Beach which appeared in your edition of October 19 and was distributed through the Associated Press. Mr. Beach gives the impression that with the wages now received by most of the country's workers they are able to buy more today than ever before, even with price increases. This is entirely contrary to what our impression has been.

We are not prepared to quote figures as Mr. Beach has done. However, there is one figure which we know from bitter personal experience is entirely erroneous. He stated that since 1939 the salaries of Government employes, especially Federal, have increased 74 per cent. We have been in the Federal service for a long time and know what our salaries were in 1939 and what they are now. How anybody can show more than a 30 per cent approximate increase is beyond imagination.

The salary of a CAF-1 Federal employe in 1939 was $1260 per year; it is now $1756. The salary of a CAF-5 was $2000 in 1939; it is now $2644. The salary of a CAF-9 in 1939 was $3200; it is now $4149.60. And so it is all along the line. Where is that so-called 74 per cent increase?

Film Hearings

I do not believe in communism, but I do believe in the fundamental American precept that a man is innocent until proved guilty. This precept is evidently not shared by the House Un-American Activities Committee investigating Hollywood. On the stand, names are named, accusations made, opinions given. Yet neither the accused nor their lawyers are permitted to question the accusers.

There is something definitely un-American, something smacking of a "police state" about these procedures. Until they are corrected, I think that Mr. Thomas and his committee should go back to school and study up on the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Better still, Mr. Thomas should forget the whole thing and make an investigation of conditions which cause people to turn to communism.

In school we are learning about government and how our country is a democracy. I am in junior high school, but to me it isn't a very good example of maintaining democracy and justice when men are deprived of their jobs, not because their work is at fault, but because of the political party they belong to. When no indication of communistic propaganda is found in the work of these writers, why should they be deprived of their jobs because they believe in communism?

As far as I know, communism has not been outlawed in America.

Transit Fare Increase

In a discussion of the proposed fare increase with some of my bus and trolley riding patients, it was pointed out that before there is another deduction from the already inadequate income of that great non-vocal and ununited group of "white collar workers", adequate seating capacity should be provided patrons of the Capital Transit Co.

It was further pointed out that the riding public is bearing the burden of those wage increases forced on them either rightly or wrongly by those protected groups who, taking advantage of collective or individual power, keep tightening the screws and raising the cost of living. Those privileged groups more often than not can afford to ride in their own cars.

Capital Transit may have a case but it should be given prolonged study since patrons of the transportation company have already within the past few months been compelled to pay a higher rate. Perhaps public ownership is long overdue. There might be a deficit under public ownership, but it could be spread more evenly and not be confined to the "white collar worker" who in many instances, has already reduced his or her inadequate diet to make ends meet.

Creation And Light

I was much impressed by the report in The Washington Post of October 22 about the new theory of the director of Princeton Observatory that the energy of light is forming new stars.

This might well have been the way by which the entire universe has come into being which in essence substantiates the story of the creation as told in the first chapter of Genesis in the Bible. Before the existence of light the universe was a chaotic wasteness, while upon origin of light it attained form and shape. Thus the first step in the creation of the world must have been the creation of light. And the light has not lost its creative force since the radiation energy of the sun converted by the green leaves of the plants into chemical energy and stored in form of numerous organic substances is the basis of all plant and animal life on this planet.

Arlington Schools

In an editorial appearing in The Washington Post on May 18 you called attention to the fact that "By the neat device of running with the other team's ball, the proponents of the status quo in Arlington's subnormal school system are attempting to continue their hold," since in response to petitions and endorsements from nearly every civic group for a school bond issue of $3,250,000, the Arlington School Board substituted a whopping six million dollar bond issue.

The neat device of the proponents of the status quo is now backfiring on the four members of the old school board now running for reelection, two of them with the support of the Greater Arlington Association. The incumbent school board members and their cronies are now attempting to run for election on an "economy platform" and are referring to the candidates nominated by delegates from civic organizations who proposed the $3,250,000 school bond issue as "free spenders."

Arlington voters will see two possible reasons for the apparently inconsistent stand now taken by the incumbent school board candidates: (1) That they are now directly opposite to their avowed position last spring in the school bond election, or (2) that the present action of the incumbent candidates and their cohorts confirms the view suggested by The Washington Post in its May 18 editorial that the school board's action last spring in proposing the six-million-dollar bond issue was carefully calculated to obtain defeat of their own bond issue.

Vishinsky And The Facts

On September 26, 1947, at the occasion of his press conference, I asked Mr. Vishinsky the following:

"To confirm or deny the authenticity of the two secret protocols signed in 1939 by Mr. Molotov and Mr. Von Ribbentrop which have been found in the files of the German Foreign Office and have been published in Europe and the United States.

"What are the activities of General Paulus and Count von Einsiedel who are said to have founded the Military Committee for the Renovation of Germany and to train German prisoners in the USSR?"

According to the official minutes as taken down by the secretariat of the United Nations, Mr. Vishinsky replied as follows:

"Mr. Epstein asks either to confirm or refute what he calls 'the secret documents, secret protocols' allegedly signed by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Germany in 1939.

"I must say a similar question was raised at the Nuernberg trials and to this I can only add that I, on my part, can ask the persons who asked such questions what they, the persons who asked these questions, can either confirm or deny with regard to the fact that there are many documents which prove that the Trotskyites were in the pay of the German Fascists?

"And in this note is the question about the activities of Generals Paulus and Von Seidlitz allegedly training in the Union of Socialist Republics territory the German war prisoners.

"In answer to this question I must say it is being said by exactly the persons who ask such questions. In other words, those persons are the persons who disseminate such slanderous rumors and the method of asking questions is for them only later for dissemination of provocative slander and hostile to the Soviet Union rumors."

Seldom has a diplomat been given the lie as fast as it happened to Mr. Vishinsky in this case. It was just a few days after he had called me publicly—at least by implication—a Trotskyite slanderer, that Mr. Byrnes' book Speaking Frankly appeared. There we can read on pages 285 and 286:

"Germany, he (Hitler) said, was not interested in the Baltic Sea bay and the bordering countries of Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. This assurance, he added, could be placed in a secret protocol, he suggested, also could set forth the spheres of influence to be observed by the two nations in Eastern Europe. . . .

"Ribbentrop arrived in Moscow on August 23. The conferees included Stalin, Molotov, Ribbentrop, Ambassador Schulenburg and Hilger.

"Stalin insisted that the secret protocol include a declaration of the Soviet Union's special interest in Bessarabia and that the northern boundary of Lithuania be fixed as the line of demarcation between the Russian and German spheres of interest. This was accepted.

"Hitler overran Poland more rapidly than Stalin had expected, and in pursuing the retreating Poles, Hitler's troops entered the Soviet sphere of influence. Stalin asked that Ribbentrop return to Moscow and make a new agreement on the line dividing Poland between them.

"Ribbentrop arrived on September 27. This time Germany agreed that the Soviet Union should take over Lithuania. A boundary line was devised splitting Poland in half and Soviet plans to set up an autonomous Soviet Republic were approved. Germany permitted the Soviet Union to take over the oil sources of Drohobycz and Borislaw, and the Soviets contracted to furnish the Nazis with 300,000 tons of raw oil from these sources."

As to my second question about the activities of General Paulus and Count von Einsiedel, I refer Mr. Vishinsky to the article by Anthony Leviero, published on the front page of the New York Times of October 16, 1947, "German Army of 100,000 Reported Set to Aid Soviet," based entirely upon official informations from the American Government in Washington. Those informations completely corroborate the well-known fact that the German Generals Paulus and Von Seydlitz founded a military committee and built up a German army on Russian soil.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

New Battle Of Britain

STOKE-ON-TRENT, England—Here, where the smoke from the collieries and the pottery works smudges the sky, is the front line in the new Battle for Britain. It is just as real a battle as the one seven years ago, when the Nazis were repulsed in the air and the world knew that Britain would stand.

On the outcome depends the future of this country which for more than a century held economic and military domination over wide areas of the earth. The new Battle of Britain is for more coal, more steel, more exports.

But because the enemy is in this instance a future threat—of decline, decay, a kind of slow death—it is difficult to inspire the front-line fighters with a sense of urgency. Ancient habits are hard to change. The pictures in peoples' minds—the way they look at the world—persist long after events have radically changed the environment.

The Chatterly-Whitfield Colliery here is a well-run mine. Before it was nationalized a year ago, along with all other coal mines, it was a profitable property. The private owners, unlike many others, had put back sufficient capital to modernize the pits and keep the operation at a high level of productivity.

YOU'D LOOK a long time before you would find an abler and more energetic man than Ernest Cope, the manager. Cope, who began as a pit boy at the age of 12, was manager of Chatterly-Whitfield before nationalization. When the National Coal Board took over all the mines last January 1, he was given charge of two additional collieries in the vicinity. He works intensely hard and it is obvious that he has the confidence of the men. Most of the 3000 miners at Chatterly-Whitfield he knows by their first names.

Yet in spite of this favorable combination, 30 per cent of the miners fail to report for work on Mondays. Absenteeism through the week averages about 28 per cent. If the force now in the mine could be got to work the full five-day week, or the new six-day week that begins November 1, the quota of coal for this pit, and more, would come out of the ground. And that goes for most of Britain's mines.

The reasons why the men do not work longer are many. They derive from a complex set of habits, from the ordeal of the war and from the swift currents of social change that are everywhere in motion. Any easy explanation such as the coming of socialization may serve a political end, but it is not a valid explanation.

Cope believes the chief reason for the high rate of absenteeism is the fact that the men can buy very little that they want with the money they make. In his North Staffordshire accent he says:

"You put 2000 fur coats in the stores here and you sell 'em for a 100 quid ($400) apiece and you bring in some nylon stockings—then the men will work. The wife'll sign up to buy a coat and they'll have to pay for it."

THE GOVERNMENT has made every effort to give mining communities first claim on the consumers' goods that are available. The shops seem to be fairly well stocked. But the men out of the pits, who earn their money the hard way, feel that postwar prices are too high and quality too low.

They have money over and above the cost of the rationed goods they buy—more money than they've ever had before. They can buy beer with it. Or they can bet on the races and play the football pools. But the most precious commodity they can buy is leisure, and that is what they're having in spite of all the exhortations to work harder and save Britain.

Still another factor is the pay-as-you-earn income tax. It cuts deep into the money the miners make on the fifth day of the week, which is perhaps the chief reason why absenteeism is so high on Mondays.

Then there is the strong persuasion of habit. In summer the miners have customarily taken two or three days a week to go into the country with their families and pick hops or fruits. They had an outing and they made a bit of money.

Last summer was the sunniest and the warmest in the memory of man. The autumn has been exceptionally mild. The weather was an added inducement to go out into the country, especially when farmers were paying $3 or $4 a day for helpers in the potato fields.

In the old days, and particularly during the long depression, it didn't matter if in the summer months the pits ran on part time. The sun and air were healthy for men living underground so much of their lives. The change was part of the leisurely cycle of English life. But it matters today. It matters desperately whether more coal comes out of the pits, for coal is the ammunition in this new Battle for Britain.

Communist Roots

By Norman Burns

Cell Rally In A French Village

Editor's Note: The author of this article is consultant to the commercial policy division of the Department of State and at present is in Geneva, Switzerland, as a member of the United States trade delegation.

BIGORRE IS a country town, in a rich little agricultural valley of the Pyrenees Mountains of southern France. There, I recently attended a rally held by local Communists. I saw how Communist propaganda operates at "the grass roots."

The rally was held on a Sunday afternoon, in a large field beyond the river, which the Communists use as a gathering place for various open-air games, speeches and dances. The entrance to the field is over a small foot-bridge beneath a huge red hammer-and-sickle shield. The night before the rally, as a build-up for the next day, the Communists had held a public dance there, attended mostly by boys and girls of high-school age, wearing red hammer-and-sickle badges, who danced vigorously and gaily to the lively French peasant waltzes. The admission charge was 10 francs (8 cents).

A CROWD of about 400 people, mostly poorly dressed workers, peasants and small shopkeepers, gathered in the field for the rally. Some prosperous-looking people peered curiously, almost furtively, from across the river; a few entered the field.

The scene was strikingly like any prewar French country fair. Crowds surged by the temporary booths, buying souvenirs, fancy colored soft drinks and food nicknacks. Some amused themselves at an archery booth. Others bet on a rabbit race, the contestants being two frightened, weary rabbits. Some showed their skill by throwing steel rings down the throat of a large iron frog at the end of one booth. Many bought lottery tickets.

Several policemen wandered through the crowd joshing with fellow townsmen. A radio loudspeaker blared forth popular music. The only signs of Communist activity, except for the hammer-and-sickle badges worn by most spectators, were large posters above some booths showing graphically how prices had gone up more than wages.

When a large crowd had assembled, various notables mounted a wooden platform in the center of the field and seated themselves before a microphone. An announcer presented them as the Socialist Mayor of Bigorre, municipal counselors of the town, and several Communist members of Parliament. The Municipal Council of Bigorre has some Communist members but the majority are Socialists and Moderates (MRP). The announcer said that the Tarbes "cell" of the party—Tarbes is a larger city 12 miles away—was happy to cooperate with the Bigorre "cell" in the organization of this rally.

THE MAIN speaker, a skillful orator who looked more like a business man than a political agitator, began with a tribute to the French underground resistance against the German occupation. France owes much to these brave men and women who risked their lives that France might be free. The Communists, he said, had been in the vanguard of the resistance movement. Some allege that the French Communist Party is a creature of Russia. That is a lie. The French Communist Party is French. Its program is French. It wants France to be strong and free.

French Communists do not believe that France's future is that of a small, weak country of 40 million people, destined to become an American colony. The French commonwealth can become a great power of 100 million people, if French colonies are given equality with the mother country.

The Communists have always believed in equality of race, religion and sex. French Communists believe that the French commonwealth should not become a tool of the Anglo-American capitalistic bloc against Russia. Nor should the French commonwealth align itself with Russia against the Anglo-American imperialists. France's true destiny is that of a great mediating power between two rival blocs.

The Communist strategy in foreign policy follows a familiar pattern. First, pure Communist propaganda is dressed in French clothes and made to appear French. Second, the Communists appeal to traditional French nationalism and France's aspiration as a mediating power. Third, the Communists attempt, then, to divert French nationalism into channels that serve Russia, namely, the detachment of France from its normal sympathy with the western world.

THE SPEAKER proceeded, then, to fish in the troubled waters of French domestic politics. France's Socialist Premier, M. Ramadier, had alleged that the continuous succession of strikes was directed by a "hidden orchestra leader." Who is the hidden orchestra leader? asked the Communist speaker. Not Stalin, but misery, he replied. Misery of the French worker squeezed by a sevenfold increase in prices and a four-fold increase in wages since 1939. Misery of the French peasant, who receives too little for his wheat. Misery of the French people, with too little to eat.

When the French worker asks for higher wages he is met with a shrug "impossible." Has anyone looked into the profits of the 200 top French families? The only answer to the wage problem is production and more production. They want to safeguard their profits. These are the same reactionaries who supported Petain. The speaker then imitated, with quavering voice, a Petain radio address: "This is Radio Vichy, Marshal Petain, the so-called hero of Verdun, who speaks to you. I am confused. I am confused." Here the audience applauded mildly. During most of the speeches it was silent.

The symbol of French misery, he said, was the lack of bread. Communists refused to adopt Petain methods of sending gendarmes into the country to take wheat from the peasants by force. A better solution must be found that would "safeguard republican principles." Ramadier's Socialist government had known about the bread crisis as early as February, but had refused to tell the truth to the people.

The Americans had delivered less wheat to France than they had promised, so they could send more to Germany. The French government had shipped wheat to Germany. Since February, the bread ration of the German worker has gone up; that of the French worker has gone down. The Ramadier government set the price of wheat so low that the peasants had planted 18 per cent less wheat for 1947 than the year before. How much better it would have been if the French government had set a fair price for wheat! Then, the peasants could have produced more wheat; and city workers could have eaten good French wheat bread, instead of hard brown bread made from bad corn flour, forced on France by the Americans at exorbitant prices.

THE COMMUNIST courtship of the traditionally conservative French peasants is a highly significant attempt to broaden the political basis of the party support by encouraging an alliance of city workers and rural peasants against other classes of society. Their attack upon American corn bread camouflages the dilemma they face in promising higher prices of wheat to the peasants without raising the price of bread to the city worker.

The Communist Party, here as elsewhere, seeks to participate in any government that happens to be in power. It seeks, at the same time, to undermine that government by "boring within," until such time as the party is able to assume power alone. The Communists participated in the Ramadier coalition government from January to May, 1947, marching, as they said, "hand in hand with the Socialists against their common enemies of the right." Simultaneously they seized every occasion to weaken the coalition government of which they were a part.

Lack of bread is the cornerstone of Communist propaganda in France. The Marshall Plan, if it succeeds in giving the French people more bread, will be of a decisive significance.

After the speeches were over, the announcer promised to hold a larger rally in two weeks. Some of the crowd returned to the side-attraction booths but the majority quietly went home.

Several days later, the Catholic Church at Bigorre held an open-air religious festival—the blessing of burning embers—which was attended by a crowd 10-fold as large as that at the Communist rally.

French Elections

By Sumner Welles

Fear Eclipses The Moderates

THE UNDERLYING significance of the French election returns has already become unmistakable. The sober truth is that they represent a flaring danger signal.

However much General de Gaulle may deny that he represents reaction, and however much the Communist leaders may posture as the evangels of enlightened liberalism, these returns presage the elimination of the truly democratic parties, and a contest between two forms of authoritarianism.

The Communist Party has slightly improved its previous showing. The 40 per cent of the total vote obtained by General de Gaulle's supporters was secured at the expense of the Popular Republican Movement and of other democratic parties.

Should the French Communists seek to return to power by constitutional methods their reunion with the Socialist Party will be necessary. Together the two parties have a bare majority in the present National Assembly. But Premier Ramadier's courageous declaration last week makes such a realignment as yet unlikely. The Socialist leaders have been publicly denounced by Moscow as traitors to the working class. Were the Communist Party to persist in its attempt to sabotage the Marshall Plan by continued strikes, the Socialist Party would find it difficult to accept Communist support, since the Socialist leaders are pledged to cooperation with the United States under the plan.

IF, HOWEVER, General de Gaulle now decides upon a militant course, the Socialists would undoubtedly consider the reconstruction of a popular front as the lesser of two evils. The surest indication of coming events will be found in the response made by the National Assembly today to Ramadier's request for a vote of confidence.

The French Communists continue methodically to organize for their return to power. They leave nothing to chance. A discouraging indication of French political confusion is to be found in the address recently delivered to the convention of the Radical Socialist Party in Nice by Edouard Herriot, one of the few able French statesmen of the older generation, wherein he indicated his willingness to form a "compromise" cabinet in which the Communists would participate. The experience of both French and Italian people during the past two years must surely make it plain the governments in which Communists take part are only paving the way for an eventual Communist dictatorship.

In the hysteria with which France is now surcharged, many French democrats seem to be dismissing as futile the "little to the left of center" as a means of combating communism, and to be coming to believe that the only alternative to communism is an authoritarian government of the right.

WITH ALL of the distinctions that must justly be made as to the differences between the political traditions and manner of being of the French and German peoples, the analogy between the conditions now obtaining in France and the conditions which existed in central Europe in the 1920s should not be too lightly dismissed. Democracy's chief bulwark in France, the white collar and professional class, the small shopkeepers, and the small farmers, is rapidly being faced with economic ruin. The franc is depreciating at the rate of 25 per cent every three months. The percentage of small savings is dropping just as rapidly.

The predominant feature in French life today is fear: fear that France will be given no protection against a German resurgence; fear that France must become involved in a war between the Soviet Union and the United States; fear that there can be no hope of economic security save through a reactionary dictatorship or through communism.

What the future holds for France depends today more than ever upon American policy. It depends upon the speed with which the American Congress makes it possible for the Marshall Plan to be carried out, and the efficiency with which the American Executive implements that plan. It depends upon the willingness of the United States to cooperate unswervingly with France in its policy toward Germany so that the French people will have no valid ground, as they now have valid ground, to fear that Germany can once more endanger their safety.

NO TRUER key to political developments in France could be found than in these words spoken to me by an outstanding Frenchman a few days ago: "The French people feel overwhelmingly that the Marshall Plan will remain a dead letter. Above all else they fear that America cannot protect them against the dangers that are mounting on the horizon of the European democracies. The whole atmosphere is poisoned with pessimism."

There is no longer any doubt that a majority of the American people support the objectives of their Government's foreign policy. But in the kaleidoscopic world in which we live those objectives are not going to be attained unless both the executive and legislative branches of our Government at length recognize that they cannot be achieved by stopgaps or by partial measures, but only by action, ample, effective and swift.

More Thousands Of Jobs Periled

A NEW and drastic program that threatens the jobs of several thousand additional war service and temporary employes here was unveiled last night by Arthur S. Flemming, a member of the Civil Service Commission.

The program is designed to find jobs within the next 45 days for an estimated 1700 laid-off career people in this area. Briefly, it provides:

1. That each agency be given a quota of the 1700 people to hire, and,

2. That any agency that fails to meet its quota will be forced to fire all of its nonveteran war service and temporary employes who hold positions jobless career people can qualify for.

The quota of each agency will be based on the number of nonveteran war service and temporary employes it has in occupational areas the career people are qualified to fill.

"Agency quotas will be reduced," Flemming told the Society for Personnel Administration last night, "only when it can be shown that there are no qualified persons with a regular Civil Service status available in any of the occupational areas for which the commission has applications."

In other words, the commission has abandoned its system in ecect for the past month of giving each agency a quota of jobless career people to place in each job field. However, this program, Flemming said, found jobs for 366 people in the accounting, statistician, economist and administrative fields.

EVEN SO, the program was widely condemned as "too slow and too time-consuming." The commission will now give one quota to each agency and the agency will be able to hire whomever it pleases from the career list so long as it fills its quota.

Flemming said the commission had found jobs for 6400 jobless career people the country over during the past seven months, but it had about the same number yet to be placed.

The GOP commission member also made an attack on the growing tendency of Government agencies to summarily fire employes who have weak characters. He said:

"The use of summary powers of dismissal to cases of persons with allegedly weak characters is simply an invitatoin to arbitrary and thoroughly unjustified action. No emergency can justify action of this kind."

He went on to say that he was "unalterably opposed" to the use of summary powers of dismissal, particularly where the question of loyalty has not been raised.

FLEMMING urged that regular and well-established procedures be used to fire unsuitable employes. And he aded that 46,875 employes had been fired for cause in a recent year which demonstrates that "we can fire people without resorting to arbitrary action."

The regular procedure, he said, was the Lloyd-LaFollette Act of 1912 which he said would be virtually nullified if the agencies continue to use the summary power of dismissal.

That act, he explained, merely requires the head of the agency give the employe a letter which would tell him that he can't be entrusted with his duties of public office because of his weak character. The employe is given from 5 to 10 days to reply to the charges. The agency head is then free or fire him if he wishes.

The State Department, Central Intelligence Agency and other agencies recently have summarily fired employes charged with having weak characters.

COMMERCE: Some 10,000 of its employes will have an effect on the future of the Administration's "save food" campaign.

They have been asked to answer a questionnaire which is designed to give Charles Luckman's Citizens Food Committee an idea of how they're doing. These employes, the country over, are asked to state frankly what they think of the campaign and for suggestions to improve it.

The first returns—only about 250—are on the critical side. They show plainly, an official said yesterday, that these 250 people aren't convinced that it's to the advantage of themselves and the country to share our food with the European democracies.

The official predicted the country would be told more facts of life of our foreign policy if all the returns ran along the same line as the first 250.

ARMY: Its Ordnance Bureau is having another personnel shakedown. Officials say it must wipe out about 75 of its 800 jobs here to get within its new budget and personnel ceilings.

The office plans to ask fro 25 to 30 employes to transfer to its dozen arsenals. Most of the employes to be transferred are engineers or else they are in the stock record and ammunition supply units. The transfers are to start early next month. An official said the employes would be more productive at the arsenals.

Some of the employes are objecting strenuously to the transfers for personal reasons. They say hardship cases aren't given consideration; that employes are ordered to go to the arsenals or else be faced with firings for "abandoning their jobs." Most of the employes slated for transfer have permanent status. However, they say they won't be able to get on Civil Service's displaced list if they are fired.

Between 40 and 50 other Ordnance employes here will be given dismissal notices this weekend.

PERSONALS: James Burns, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, is on the mend after a physical collapse in San Francisco . . . Robert C. Hendon is chief of the new prevention and security department of the Railway Express Co. A 35-year-old G-man, he has been administrative assistant to J. Edgar Hoover . . . W. Traynham Houston, technical adviser at Internal Revenue, has resigned to open up his own accounting office in Alexandria.

DRIVE: The United National Association of Postal Clerks yesterday went on record for a flat $600 pay raise for all postal employes. The resolution was adopted unanimously by its executive committee in session here at the Continental Hotel.

LEAVE: Senator McCarran has asked Civil Service to order official leave for those Federal employes who assist in military funerals for the returned war dead.

Farmer, Andersen Disagree On Needs of Europe's Hungry

Austin, Minn., Oct. 26 (U.P.)—The congressional farm bloc leader and the Iowa cabbage farmer, seated four chairs apart at the long banquet table, peered at each other cautiously throughout the dinner.

from an investigation of the relief

Both recently had returned needs in Europe—the farmer paying his own way and the legislator as a member of a congressional committee.

The dinner was given in honor of the traveling House Agriculture Committee.

A sandy-haired corn grower raised his hand.

"Like every other farmer I want to know whether it's true that they are starving in Europe," he said.

Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.), who represents this district, rose to his feet, straightening his jacket. He explained that his committee had traveled through 11 countries in Europe.

"We saw no starvation," he said. "True, people in the low income brackets can't get the food they want because they can't pay for it. We have the same kind of people but they have more of them."

He said that the need for European relief has been "greatly exaggerated" by President Truman. Any aid that is given, he said, should be administered through some private agency such as the International Red Cross.

Jay C. Hormel, president of the meat packing company, presiding, turned to the Iowa farmer.

"We have another man here who has been around Europe, too," he said. "Harold, won't you tell the people what you were telling me earlier this evening."

Harold L. McKinley, St. Ansgar, Iowa, one of 22 farmers who made an investigation tour of Europe, got to his feet.

"I don't like to argue with a Congressman," he said. "True, we didn't see anybody starving either, but we saw an awful lot of hungry people."

He told the group that if we "don't do something they will be starving in Europe."

"Now take Germany . . ." he began.

"I forgot to mention Germany," Andresen said. "Things are pretty tough there."

"I'm glad you mentioned that, sir," McKinley said. "Things were terrible there."

"The thing that disturbed me as much as anything I saw were the hungry kids. Do you remember the undersized kids that you saw in Holland?"

"Yes, that was pretty bad, too," Andresen said. "We saw a lot of kids who had been reduced to eating narcissus bulbs and tulip bulbs."

McKinley addressing the crowd of 50 farmers, said:

"I'm Scotch and supposed to be hard boiled and with no heart. But for the sake of those kids I am hoping we feed our hogs to just a little lighter weight and keep our cows just a little thinner and send them 100 million bushels of grain to keep them from starving between now and the next crop season."

ISN'T IT BETTER TO BUY THE BEST!

Your money's worth in a newspaper mean getting the best and the most!

AS A READER of The Washington Post you are entitled to know what you are getting in both quality and quantity of reading material.

The quality of news and features each reader eventually determines for himself. Yet it's nice to know that Washingtonians who read The Washington Post and other newspapers vote The Washington Post best for news coverage—by 2 to 1, 7 to 1 and 8 to 1—over the other papers. It's helpful to know, too, that The Washington Post has been voted best by Washington correspondents, that it is quoted more often in Congress as indicated by the Congressional Record, that The Washington Post is the Capital newspaper referred to most often by outside editors. To say nothing of the fact, that more awards for various kinds of journalistic excellence have been awarded to The Washington Post.

As for quantity, that's a simpler matter. Media Records, Inc., measures both news and advertising space in all Washington newspapers every month. And here's the report of the first nine months of the year—January through September, 1947:

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

OBVIOUSLY SID LUCKMAN had consulted his pocket calendar and verified the day as Monday before getting to his feet as guest speaker at the Touchdown Club's Mayflower Hotel soiree. For a guy who can be so insufferably nasty to the Redskins on Sunday, Luckman was the mold of good high regard for his victims of the weekend.

POVICH

"We beat a good football team," he lied blandly, "and any time we lick Sammy Baugh we consider ourselves lucky." He said he thought Baugh was the best football player in the whole football business and his sincerity on that point was unquestioned. "When I'm sitting on the Bears' bench and we see Sammy draw his arm back, we know it's a touchdown threat," said the man who out-threw Baugh, three touchdowns to one, the other day.

Bill Brundidge, the emcee at the speaker's table, thanked Luckman for his little speech in tribute to Baugh, and he says I can quote him directly. What he said was: "Thank you very much, Sid, and I think I can speak for the Redskins when I say it's always a pleasure to see you sitting on the Bears' bench."

A BIT LATER, Baugh was introduced and got to his feet easily, like a man who had had a lot of practice at it. Baugh, in fact, had spent most of Sunday afternoon getting to his feet after picking Bears off his neck. With no 200-pound lavaliers to encumber him, Sammy actually bounced up to take his place at the microphone.

Baugh handed the posies right back to Luckman, immediately. "Since Sid came into the league, I guess I became the second-best forward passer," he said. Sammy was more nimble on his feet at the Mayflower than he was in Griffith Stadium the other day. Recalling Bulldog Turner's 96-yard run with one of his intercepted passes, he said: "When I throw that ball I'm a touchdown threat all right—against the Redskins."

Baugh said the Redskins were licked by a good team. "And we ought to know—we've been licked by a lot of teams," he added wryly. "The Redskins are scouting all the local college and prep school talent around here, I understand, and I wouldn't be surprised if they're thinking of signing a whole new team."

JIM TATUM, the Maryland coach, was called to the rostrum and explained neatly how he had narrowly ducked the role of Good Samaritan in Maryland's 21-19 victory over VPI last weekend. "Down at VPI they said they were ready to fire their coach if he didn't beat us, and we almost saved his job," said Tatum.

Tatum was Maryland's twelfth man last Saturday and was thrown for a 20-yard loss the first time he set foot on the field. "They penalized us half the distance to the goal line when I went out to protest a penalty against us on a fair catch. The referee said I was intimidating him. Now if I could just get some of our Maryland boys to intimidate somebody, we might win another game this season."

Skip Stahley, the George Washington coach, whose teams have now lost seven in a row, expressed doubt that you learn from adversity, as the copy books say. "Right now, I'm willing to take a chance on learning something while winning a ball game." He said the University of Virginia, his first conqueror this year, showed him the finest set of backs he's seen in 15 years.

THE FEATURED speaker was Mr. H. C. (Curly) Byrd, president of Maryland University, who applauded football as a force for good, especially in these times of social unrest. "Our coaches have an immense responsibility to the squad and student body. I can always say of football, you never saw a football player, college or professional, with any inclination toward communism."

Byrd, an old football player himself, and a successful coach before he moved into the president's chair of the same school for which he starred, declared he was unimpressed by the so-called novelty of the Bears' T-formation. "I saw Sid Luckman throw a touchdown pass on Sunday off the same formation that I quarterbacked in 1908 one day when I threw three touchdown passes against Washington and Lee."

And as for the wailing of the various coaches, to which he had listened for most of an hour, President Byrd said, "It reminds me of Senator Josh Lee who used to call 'em long-horn speeches—two long horns with a lot of bull between."

WHAT MAKES FOOTBALL WONDERFUL—Left, Bob Waterfield, Los Angeles quarterback, looks as if he is sticking his fist into the face of Bosh Pritchard, Philadelphia halfback, in the Rams-Eagles National League game in Philadelphia. Whether Waterfield's left landed or not, Bob made the tackle. The Eagles won, 14-7. Center, Bill Swiacki, Columbia end, makes a shoestring catch of a pass by Quarterback Gene Rossides on Army's 4-yard line in Columbia's surprising victory over the Cadets in New York, 21-20. Swiacki caught eight of Rossides throws. This one led to Columbia's tying touchdown and the Lions won when Fullback Ventan Yablonski kicked the twenty-first point. Lions Hope To Improve Lead Tonight

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Riding a two game winning streak, the Washington Lions will have an opportunity to increase their Eastern Division lead here tonight at the expense of the New Haven Ramblers.

A victory over the Ramblers combined with a Providence loss to St. Louis tonight, would put the Washington team in a more secure position than their one point margin gives them at present.

In two games against New Haven, the Lions have come out even. Washington took a 4-3 decision here, but dropped a 5-2 contest on Rambler ice.

New Haven Has Young Team

New Haven, like the Lions, has a young team. Seven former New York Rovers have made the grade with the Ramblers.

Unbeaten in all three starts at home, Coach Jack Riley's youngsters took over first place after whipping the last place Springfield Indians twice last week.

Incidentally, the 7-5 victory at Springfield Saturday was the Lions' first road triumph of the year.

Lions Get That "Punch"

In contrast to the spotty offensive play shown in the first few games, the Lions displayed plenty of punch in its last two outings, much of it supplied by this trio.

The addition of big Jim Portland has helped the defense, which left plenty to be desired in the early contests. Despite the excellence of Goalie Gordon Bell, opposing teams were making his life miserable as they subjected him to an unrelenting barrage.

In the last Springfield game here, Bell had a relatively easy time of it as Portland and Larry Archambault broke up most Indian drives with an efficient display of poke checking.

Scotty Mair has paced the Lion goal getters and in latest statistics released by league headquarters, Mair ranks in a four way tie for third place among the pointmakers, with six goals and two assists.

Mair's six goals put him in a three-way tie for first place among the goal scorers, while Center Ken Schlutz, who also has eight points, is tied for the lead in assists with six.

The leading scorers:

	GP.	G.	A.	TP.
Davies, New Haven	7	4	6	10
McKay, Buffalo	7	6	3	9
Kobussen, Springfield	6	5	2	7
Mair, Washington	7	6	1	7
Grosso, St. Louis	7	4	3	7

Turyn, Emerson, Eschaves Honored

Vic Turyn, Emerson Gardner and Chow Eschaves were guests at yesterday's touchdown luncheon after being named the outstanding area college, prep and high school football players of the week.

Turyn, first string quarterback at Maryland; Gardner, backfield man at Landon School and Eschaves, Anacostia High ball carrier, stood out for their respective teams in last weekend's games.

Football Revived At Annapolis High

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 27 (AP).—Annapolis High School will revive football as an interscholastic sport, Dr. Howard A. Kinhart, principal, announced today.

An enlarged athletic program also anticipates resumption of lacrosse and wrestling. The school now engages in basketball, baseball and soccer, bdt has not played football for about 17 years.

'Skins Scrimmage as 'Honeymoon' Is Over

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Whether they intended to or not, the Redskins yesterday admitted they aren't so terrific.

Reaching the depths of despair following Sunday's 56-20 shellacking by the Bears, the 'Skins staged their first Monday scrimmage in years.

Secondly, they sought to sign Jim Castiglia, the former Georgetown fullback who couldn't make the grade with the last place Baltimore Colts of the All-America Conference.

Coach Turk Edwards, seething over Sunday's near-record 56-20 shelling by the Chicago Bears, had only a few words to say: "We'll scrimmage constantly until we learn to knock somebody down. The Redskins seem to have forgotten whatever they knew about tackling and blocking."

Tereshinski Misses Drill

Joe Tereshinski, rookie end who dislocated his elbow in what was courteously attributed toan awkward fall, was missing from the session. He'll be out two weeks, it is thought, missing this Sunday's Griffith Stadium game with the Philly Eagles and next Sunday's invasion of Pittsburgh . . . Another major injury was to Fullback Vince Pacewic's back just as Fullback Sal Rosato is recovering from the same ailment . . .

Castiglia was with the Eagles last year and asked for his release to join the Colts. The Eagles granted it, but it was not approved by Commissioner Bell. Thinking he had been made a free agent, Castiglia then signed with the Colts. Bell said he would not classify Castiglia as a "contract jumper" because of this technicality and if the other NFL teams waived on him, he could join the Redskins today.

Officials Still Have Hopes

In spite of Edwards disgust with his wobbly pros, matching that of fans, most Redskin officials still like the team's chances of taking the Eastern Division title . . . "Eight wins, perhaps only seven, will do it," they remind . . . "And we can win all our remaining seven games" . . . That would seem a big order with the opposition, after the Eagles and Steelers, comprised of Detroit, Chicago Cardinals, the Boston Yanks twice and the New York Giants . . . Wilbur Moore, just returned to the active list after a year of backfield coaching, was one of the reasons the score wasn't 73-0 again. At one point he made three tackles in a row and at another he got off the ground to stop Don Kindt's 49-yard dash short of a touchdown

Walter Johnson Boys Get Awards

All of the players on the championship teams will appear on Bob Wolff's sports broadcast over WINX at 6:15 p. m., Wednesday, after which the awards will be made.

The winning teams were Anacostia Eagles, Rosedale Indians, Banneker Yellow Jackets and Francis Bugs.

Peckinpaugh Out As Buffalo Chief, Says 'I Was Fired'

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 27 (U.P.).—Roger Peckinpaugh, former major league shortstop and manager, was dismissed today as general manager of the Buffalo Bisons of the International League.

Paul Richards, 1947 field manager, was immediately named to the dual post of general manager and field manager.

Benjamin D. Reisman, attorney for the club, said the directors decided that a change was necessary following a conference with Peckinpaugh 10 days ago and that Peckinpaugh was given the choice of resigning or being released.

("I want it understood that I was fired," Peckinpaugh said at his Cleveland, Ohio, home.)

Reisman indicated that a difference in policy on the club's scouting and farm system was responsible for the split.

Pro Playoff—or Else

'I'm Going to Needle Hell Out of NFL,' Says Ingram

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 27 (AP).—Admiral Jonas Ingram (USN ret.), commissioner of the All-America Football Conference, forthrightly declared today:

"I'm going to needle the hell out of the National League until we get the recognition due us and they agree to meet us in a playoff."

Referring to the older NFL's refusal to meet in a post-season game for the National pro grid title, the salty admiral, who recently offered to send the All-America's second best team against the NFL's champion, blustered:

"Why, we have four teams in this league better than anything they have."

Using major league baseball as an example, Admiral Ingram pointed out that the National and American Leagues at first were considered strange bedfellows.

"Now, I don't want to sleep with the National Football League," the admiral told a gathering of Southern California football writers, "but I do want to get along."

He predicted that public demand eventually would force a playoff between the two rival pro loops.

"The people want, and have a right to know, which is the real pro champion," the commissioner said. "I'm going to fight for this thing right down the line."

He lauded "such men as Bert Bell (head of the NFL) and George Halas (of the Chicago Bears) for their pioneering in the pro field," but added: "I think we've shown that the country is big enough for two big leagues and that everybody, particularly the players, benefit by them."

Ingram said he made no apology for the talent raids which the All-America "had to make" on the NFL to get started—"that's not my problem. My concern is to rectify the feeling growing out of that."

Caps Down Toledo, 74-68, In Opener

BULLETIN

Fighting off a last-quarter Toledo rally, the Washington Capitals defeated the Westerners, 74-68, last night at Uline Arena.

Before an unexcited crowd of less than 1000, the Washington Capitols held a 38-to-28 halftime lead over the Toledo Jeeps in an unexciting exhibition basketball game last night at Uline Arena.

October may be a month for football, ice hockey and Indian summer, but it certainly wasn't conducive to good basketball. Both teams were guilty of sloppy play, particularly the Capitols who were playing their first game of the season.

Only the officials, Phil Fox and Arnold Heft, were in midseason form, having called 20 fouls by recess time.

The Caps led all the wal, although the Jeeps threatened to overtake them several times.

Washington led, 18 to 12, at the quarter and scored 20 more points against Toledo's 16 in the second period.

Baugh, Luckman Set 3 Pass Marks In Wild Game

Philadelphia, Oct. 27 (AP).—Sid Luckman and Sammy Baugh, perhaps the two greatest passers in football history, teamed to establish three new passing marks in Sunday's gridiron clash in which the Chicago Bears whipped the Washington Redskins, 56-20, league statisticians disclosed today.

Luckman, pitching for the Bears, and Baugh who teamed with his understudy, Jim Youel, in doing the Skins' chucking, hurled a total of 84 pases, completed 51 and gained 631 yards.

Each figure represents a new total for two teams.

The previous record was established where it was broken, at Washington's Griffith Stadium, and the same Mr. Baugh participated in that hurling marathon on December 1, 1940.

Baugh, however, tossed only 7, completing 5, while Davey O'Brien of the Philadelphia Eagles threw 60, completing 33. Thus the pair tossed 67, completed 38 and gained 352 yards.

Incidentally, the 'Skins won

W & L Guard Out With Broken Leg

Lexington, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—Washington and Lee's Coach Art Lewis learned today that his first-string Freshman Guard Tom Ciancutti received a broken leg and other injuries in an automobile accident near Everett, Pa., early today while returning from a visit to his home town of New Kensington.

Fred George, another regular who alternates with Ciancutti at left guard, was reported to have been slightly injured when the car in which the two were riding struck a concrete bridge on a curve. Both were taken to Everett Hospital for treatment.

Michigan Slips to 2d, Texas, Penn Are Next

By Jack Hand

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Notre Dame, still supposedly playing "under wraps," moved to the head of the class today in the weekly Associated Press poll of football writers, supplanting still-unbeaten Michigan.

The Minnesota Gophers apparently rubbed some of the glamour off the Michigan machine before succumbing, 13-6, for the writers shunted the Wolverines into second place.

A week ago they commanded 147 of 168 first-place votes. This time they grabbed only 89 with 78 of the 195 ballots listing the Fighting Irish at the top of the heap.

Texas remained a strong contender for top honors with 25 firsts and Pennsylvania, gaining strength on its 21-0 win over Navy, was named No. 1 by 11 voters.

Irish Down Iowa, 21-0

Coach Frank Leahy's Irish slipped past Iowa, 21-0, without showing too much of their attack to future rivals. With Navy scheduled to test them Saturday in Cleveland, fans may learn more about the true strength of Notre Dame.

Leahy cautiously commented after the Iowa game "they improved over last week and they will continue to improve. It will take a very good team to beat them."

The point score from the most extensive weekly poll in many years showed Notre Dame at 1734 holding a slim 45-point edge over Michigan at 1689 with Texas a close third at 1516.

When the Longhorns of Texas met the Southern Methodist Mustangs, who climbed to eighth place on a 7-0 win over UCLA, in one of Saturday's feature games, the Nation will get a better line of these two Southwest Conference powers.

Pennsylvania moved from eighth to fourth on its Navy success and now runs into Princeton, which knocked them off last year in one of the major upsets of the season.

USC Moves Up to Fifth

The big battle on the Pacific Coast resulting in a 39-14 decision for Southern California over California sent the victorious Trojans into fifth place only a few points behind Penn. Coach Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf's Golden Bears fell out of the first 10.

Georgia Tech, enjoying a breather with The Citadel, moved up a peg to sixth position and Penn State advanced from ninth to seventh by outlasting previously unbeaten West Virginia, 21-14.

Duke's stock soared on the Blue Devils' 13-6 conquest of Wake Forest and they came all the way from 15th to 19th position. Something will have to give when Duke plays Georgia Tech Saturday.

Despite Army's upset loss to Columbia, 21-20, ending their nonlosing string after 32 games, the Cadets managed to hold 10th place in the rankings, only two points ahead of Illinois which played an 0-0 tie with them earlier.

Illinois' loss to Purdue sent them them tumbling to 11th but oddly enough the victory didn't help Purdue too much nor did Minnesota's sturdy stand against Michigan give them much of a boost in the standings.

How They Rank:

1. Notre Dame (78)	1734
2. Michigan (69)	1689
3. Texas (25)	1516
4. Pennsylvania (11)	1165
5. Southern California (6)	1133
6. Georgia Tech (3)	957
7. Penn State (2)	632
8. Southern Methodist	555
9. Duke (12)	383
10. Army	366

11. Illinois, 206; 12, Virginia, 193; 13, Kentucky, 79; 14, California, 65; 15, Wake Forest, 61; 16, Purdue, 45; 17, Louisiana State, 35; 18, Alabama, 33; 18, UCLA, 33; 20, Columbia, 27.

Others receiving votes were Texas Christian, 12; North Carolina, 10; Nevada and Utah, each 7; Minnesota, Missouri and Kansas, each 6; Navy and Utah State, each 5; Northwestern, 4; Tennessee, 3; Mississippi State, Wisconsin, Yale and Franklin and Marshall, each 2; West Virginia, William and Mary, Oregon and Catawba, each 1.

Gridder Breaks Leg—Unusual? It's a Gal

Milwaukee, Oct. 27 (AP).—Equality for women has been carried to the breaking point, at least in football participation.

Trailblazer — and victim — is 16-year-old Betty Brudnicki, who suffered a fracture leg yesterday when trapped in a downfield block by two other girls in an all-female sand lot football game.

Terps Install Television Sets for Game

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

OVER 5000 MARYLAND alumni, who'd like to see the Terps play West Virginia in Saturday's homecoming scrap at College Park will have to settle for the next-best thing—a Television account of the contest.

Able to accommodate only about 15,000 of the 20,000 who want to sit in on the fray, Terp athletic officials yesterday decided to install four Television sets in Ritchie Coliseum for the benefit of the overflow they're unable to seat.

Not in years has there been such a terrific demand to see the Old Liners play.

THE SPIRIT OF Georgetown was never more evident than last Friday night in the Hoya dressing room after the team had shellacked NYU at Griffith Stadium.

Scatback Johnny Kivus was announced as the winner of a suit of clothes for being selected the most outstanding Hoya against the Violets.

But Kivus, whose 53-yard sprint enabled him to win the nod from the Washington sports writers making the selection, declined the honor in favor of Halfback Johnny Hughes, who scored two touchdowns.

"You take it, Johnny," Kivus told his teammate, "you deserve it more than I do."

APOLOGIES TO Rasty Doran for naming him as the official who called the roughing penalty against Maryland Saturday which led up to VPI's first touchdown. It was not Umpire Doran who detected Terp End George Simler making contact with VPI Safetyman Dick DeShazo, who had belatedly signaled for a fair catch.

It was Head Linesman McIntosh. From the press box it appeared that DeShazo's signal for a fair catch came too late and that his hand was only raised half way. Coach Jim Tatum of the Terps thought so, too, and expressed his opinion in no uncertain terms from the bench. Whereupon the Terps were penalized again, this time to their own 19 from where Tech busted over for a touchdown three plays later.

ALTHOUGH THEY got pasted, 25-0, by Georgetown and have been pummeled by four other teams this season, obeservers thought the NYU club was a well-coached unit. Bemoaning the luck of his team, Coach Hooks Mylin said, "I've got a student body of 40,000 to drewfrom, but am lucky to get 35 out for practice. . . . In New York, boys don't like bodily contact. They prefer basketball and partying." . . . Despite his team's fine performance against Maryland Saturday, Jimmy Kitts will probably be let out at VPI after the current season. But if it were up to his players, Kitts would have a lifetime job at Tech. . . . Credit Quarterback Vic Turyn with one of the smartest plays of the year against VPI Saturday. With his team trailing, 19-7, in the last period, Turyn noted that Tech had substituted a new right halfback. Huryn called for a running play over the Terp right end and the Tech backfield replacement came all the way over to make the tackle. . . . Then Turyn ordered a pass play which had End George Simler criss-cross from the right side of the field to the left. It worked perfectly as the Tech back, sucked in by the maneuver, darted over again and left his post uncovered. All Simler had to do was catch the ball and run 31 yards untouched for a score.

Jack Scores 4 Times in Last 2 Games

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—Jack (Flying) Cloud, William and Mary's All-Southern Conference fullback from Norfolk, Va., threatened today to take the league's individual point-making leadership away from Lu Gambino, Maryland's stellar halfback from Baltimore, Md.

Scoring four touchdowns in the Indian's last two contests, Cloud had soared into second place with a total of 42 points for the season, thus trailing Gambino, held pointless in two successive battles, by only a single touchdown—6 points.

Six players were tied for third place, each with 24 points.

Deacons Meet W. & M.

The big conference game this week finds Wake Forest's Deacons, beaten Saturday by Duke, 13-6, invading William and Mary at Williamsburg, Va. The loser of the struggle, expected to be one of the hottest in the conference this season, will undoubtedly drop from the running for the league crown.

A lot of the spotlight this week, however, will be focused outside of the loop as Duke's Blue Devils, only undefeated club remaining in the 16-team circuit, journey to Atlanta to tackle unbetaen and untied Georgia Tech. Only a 14-14 tie with Navy keeps the Dukes from boasting a perfect record so far this campaign.

W-L Takes on Army

Washington and Lee's Generals, sharing the conference lead at the present with Duke with three victories and no defeats in family competition, will travel to West Point, N. Y., to tangle with an Army eleven that will be smarting from its first defeat in 33 successive tilts.

North Carolina's Tarheels, doing well again after two defeats early in the season, will play hosts at Chapel Hill, N. C., to Tennesssee.

31 College Teams Still Have Perfect Records

New York, Oct. 27 (U.P.).—Only 31 college football teams were around to answer the roll call on the perfect record list tonight and the 13 absentees from last week's list weren't playing hookey either—they just weren't members in good standing any more.

Gone was good old Slippery Rock, Pa., Teachers—but so were the California Bears, who until they cracked up against the truckin' Trojans of Southern California were hailed as the West's new wonder team.

Still leading the way among the Nation's major elevens were Texas, Notre Dame, Michigan, Penn State, Southern Methodist, Georgia Tech, and Utah and not necessarily in that order either.

Although all of these big fellows survived, none except Georgia Tech got by with any particular ease and the Engineers had the next best thing to a day off since they breathed past the Citaled. Texas was shaky in topping Rice, Notre Dame either was operating in low gear or had under-estimated Iowa, Michigan had the dickens of a time beating Minnesota, Southern Methodist just squeezed past UCLA in the last period, and Utah was troubled at times against Wyoming.

The "Honor Roll":

MIDWEST
SIX VICTORIES: Loras (Iowa), Northern South Dakota Teachers, Findlay (Ohio).
FIVE VICTORIES: Michigan, Hanover (Ind.), Hillsdale (Mich.), Upper Iowa, Denison (Ohio), Valley City (N. Dak.) Teachers, Ellendale (N. Dak.) Normal, Missouri Valley, North Central of Naperville, Ill.
FOUR VICTORIES: Notre Dame.

EAST
SIX VICTORIES: West Chester (Pa.) Teachers.
FIVE VICTORIES: Penn State, New Hampshire.
FOUR VICTORIES: Pennsylvania, Wesleyan (Conn.), Trinity (Conn.), Montclair (N. J.) Teachers.

SOUTH
FIVE VICTORIES: Georgia Tech, Virginia, Middle Tennessee State.
FOUR VICTORIES: Louisville University.

SOUTHWEST
SIX VICTORIES: Texas, East Texas State, Cameron (Okla.) Aggies.

FAR WEST

ROCKIES
FIVE VICTORIES: Utah.

DEAR FOLKS:

Trainer Charles M. Feltner, who handles a large public stable, added considerable to his stock over the weekend. He purchased three horses from the King Ranch in the interest of Joseph Tucci, Washington owner, and claimed a fourth, Peave Harbor, from the Brookmeade Stable for Ridgewood Stable. The horses purchased from King Ranch were Incline, Amancer and Fresh Breeze. Amancer was scheduled to run today for his new owner. Last Saturday's handle of $1,397,905 brought the total play for the 22 days of the meeting to $20,715,707, as against a total for the same period last year of $18,880,055. The daily averages for 1947 and 1946 are $941,623 and $858,184. Business at the mutuel windows is now up 9.7 per cent. Rokeby Stable holds first place among the money winners in the steeplechase division with $10,640 to $8260 for Mrs. S. C. Clark, jr. Tommy Feld, jockey, and, Jack Skinner, trainer, are far in front in their respective fields in the jumping group, having accounted for five of the nine steeple chase vents run to date. See you on the rail.—BILL.

McMasters, Area AGA Head, Wins Pro-Pro With Greiner

Carroll McMasters, golf professional at Baltimore's Woodholme Country Club, had quite a time yesterday.

First, he was elected president of the Middle Atlantic section of the Professional Golfers Association at the annual elections held at Prince Georges.

Then, he teamed with Otto Greiner, also of Woodholme, to win the PGA's Pro-Pro Tournament which followed the elections. McMasters and Greiner went around the Prince Georges course with a best ball 65, seven under par and a pair of shots better than the second place team of Charles Bassler and Rick McHale of Chevy Chase.

The McMasters-Greiner team went out in 32 and came in with a 33, while the Bassler-McHale combination had a 34-33 round.

McMasters succeeded Mel Shorey of Indian Spring, as area PGA president. Al Houghton, Prince Georges professional, was re-elected chairman of the tournament committee.

Other posts went to Bill Hardy, Chevy Chase, who was named vice president of the Washington district; Ralph Beach, Suburban, vice president of the Baltimore district and Ocean View's Johnny Kelly, Virginia area vice president.

Out Fishing . . .

By Jack Bell

THROUGHOUT eastern States Indian summer has produced a dangerous forest fire condition. Drought is rapidly drying up rivers and streams which will create serious conditions on trout streams when the freezeup comes. Headwaters of streams, where trout normally spawn, are too low if not dried up.

Conservation departments, in hope of early rain, are waiting until almost the eve of hunting seasons before making any announcements. New York State was the first to declare no hunting.

Maine, where terrible fires now rage, has declared "no hunting until sufficient rain falls."

There is still hope that the season will open November 15 in Maryland and Virginia as originally scheduled.

AS A RESULT of a recent meeting of 78 member clubs of the League of Maryland Sportsmen at Annapolis, Ernest A. Vaughn, director of game and inland fish, announced the commission will conduct a public hearing November 3.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m. in the clubhouse of the Tri-State Sportsmen's Club, Inc., 4 miles outside of Salisbury, Md.

The following recommendations and proposed new regulations will be discussed:

1. A resolution urging postponement of a $45,000 expenditure on Bottle Run trout and bass rearing ponds until Beaver Creek Hatchery is completed.
2. A resolution urging addition of white perch to the species of fish that may be taken in nontidal waters between February 15 and November 30.
3. Opening of Evitts Creek in Allegany County (from Route 40 to the Potomac) to fishing for all species, except trout, during the regular season.
4. Exempt resident dealers in Washington County from the regulation limiting the number of live fish bait or bait fish any person may have in his possession.

Proposed by Tri-State Sportsmen's Clubs, Inc.:

1. Advance opening date on bass to June 1, instead of July 1, in Eastern Shore regions 4 and 6.
2. Permit the use of pistols loaded with blanks in training dogs for hunting upland game birds.

On November 4, at 9 a. m., the commission will hold its quarterly meeting in Salisbury.

Ocean Brief Has Easy Time in 5 Horse Field

10 Drop Out Of Feature At Laurel

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 27.—Carr Hatch's Ocean Brief scared most of the horses out of the Diplomat, today's feature race, and then trounced her five opponents. Ten horses were withdrawn from the six furlong sprint.

With Ocean Brief an odds-on favorite, Jockey Sterling Young took him to the front at the first jump and kept him there, winning with daylight to spare.

S. Greenfield's High Trend was second with Carolyn K. Stable's Marble Arch third. Simon Pure, Repand and Appean Via comprised the "also ran" department.

Ocean Brief Pays $3.20

Ocean Brief did her stuff to the tune of a $3.20 win mutuel in the field of 3-year-olds of little more than ordinary ability. She was clocked for the six furlongs in 1:11 3/5.

Jockeys Doug Dodson and Johnny Gilbert divided saddle honors for the day with two winners each. However, today's pair made it five winners in as many mounts for Dodson over a two-day period.

He began his streak in the Selima Stakes on Saturday with Calumet's Whirl Some. He came back in the next to win with the same barn's Twosy and then wound up the day with a victory aboard the Lazy F Ranch's Calvados.

Dodson Rides Captain Kidd

Dodson opened today's program with a victory with Mrs. E. E. Bromley's Captain Kidd, taking a photo decision at a $5.20 mutuel. He came in with Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Surrender in the fifth race, his next saddle appearance, the colt paying an $11.20 mutuel. That was his last mount of the day.

Gilbert put the finishing touches on the $35.80 daily double pay-off, started by Dodson, by winning the second race with Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Persian Kitten at $18.60. He next appeared in action in the fourth race and brought W. E. Charles, jr.'s Peanut's Girl home via the photo to score at $16.

By Robert Bruskin

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Fifty-six nations joined today in voting outright condemnation of propaganda that might "provoke or encourage" war—including civil war.

The United Nations' political committee rejected all points of a Soviet proposal that would make "warmongering" a criminal offense, then agreed on a compromise in which even Andrei Vishinsky of Russia joined with Warren R. Austin of the United States in approving.

It was the first time at this Assembly when all nations acted in common agreement on a major matter. Only Haiti was absent.

Vishinsky Smilingly Agrees

Vishinsky's vitrio, with which he had plastered the label of "warmonger" on numerous American newspapers, magazines and officials, turned to a sugary lemonade today. He readily—and even good naturedly—agreed to the compromise effected by Australia, Canada and France. He even smiled at the defeat of his own resolution.

"We supported it because it meets the main idea wich was in the Soviet resolution—condemnation of propaganda for war," said Andrei Gromyko of Russia. "Now we face an additional task in carrying it out in practice."

"This is wonderful to have us all vote the same way," said Austin, who originally opposed any resolution which might interfere with the American right of free speech. "I hope it is a sign of a change in the atmosphere. There is absolutely nothing left of an imputation of 'warmongering' in the resolution."

Polish Proposal Defeated

Faced with certain defeat on that part of her resolution blaming "reactionary circles" in the United States, Greece and Turkey for "warmongering," Vishinsky withdrew that paragraph in favor of an amendment by Poland. The Polish proposal eliminated all blame, but it too was defeated by a vote of 23 to 18, with 14 abstentions.

As finally approved, the resolution protects the right of free speech provided in the United States Constitution. Austin insisted, against Vishinsky's loud objections, on inserting the phrase guaranteeing constitutional protection. That was approved by a vote of 22-17 with 14 nations abstaining.

It was interpreted to mean that no curb would be legally placed on the American press, on its government officials or anyone else in this country.

The Soviet constitution also guarantees "freedom of the press" with an obligation to "strengthen the socialist system." There was no immediate indication how the Russians would interpret this resolution in their diatribes against the United States, since its newspapers and other periodicals are published by the Communist Party, government agencies, and trade-unions—all censored by an agency of the ministry of education.

Outline of Resolution

The resolution, which must still be approved by the General Assembly;

2. "Requests the government of each member to take appropriate steps within its constitutional limitation to promote, by all means of publicity and propaganda available to them, friendly relations among nations based upon the purposes and principles of the Charter; to encourage the dissemination of all information designed to give expression to the undoubted desire of all people for peace."

The resolution is to be given to the Conference on Freedom of Information at its Geneva meeting next March. But several delegates said they believed its purpose was to have governments take immediate action to put its recommendations into effect after Assembly passage.

Two Women Fall to Death On Icy Peak in New Mexico

Santa Fe, N. Mex., Oct. 27 (AP).—The crushed bodies of two Los Alamos atomic energy project secretaries, killed on a mountain climbing trip, were found today at the bottom of a ravine below an icy slope on 13,275-foot North Truchas Peak.

Miss Krauss

They were Frances B. Krauss, 34, former Wac from Baltimore, and Mildred Hartig, 35, of Evansville, Ind.

The bodies were found about 8:30 last night by Sam Martin, a guide who accompanied the women, and a State patrolman.

After climbing the peak Saturday, the three started the descent between 3 and 4 p. m. One suggested a shortcut across a wide expanse of ice, and against Martin's advice, Miss Krauss started across the slippery slope.

She had gone only a short distance when she fell, sliding several hundred feet on the ice and cutting her leg and head.

Martin and Miss Hartig reached her, but were unable to remove her without a rope. Miss Hartig remained with Miss Krauss while Martin set out for the rope.

He left them clinging to a small rock to keep from sliding down the mountainside.

When he reached the foot of the peak he could not longer see the women. Fearing they had lost their holds, he searched until about midnight and then went for help. The bodies finally were found several hundred feet below where Martin had left the girls.

Gambling Drive Nets 25

Detroit, Oct. 27 (U.P.).—Authorities began preliminary prosecution today against operators of the Lucky Star Mutuel House, an alleged racket police said grossed 18 million dollars a year and was the largest ever smashed outside New York City.

Twenty-five defendants, including 2 women, were arraigned on warrants charging conspiracy to violate the State gambling laws.

Police named two pairs of brothers, Sam and Joe Lobaido and Rico and Joe Friziola, as the ringleaders.

Police investigation began last year after another Lobaido brother, Frank, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the rape and savage knifing of a 7-year-old girl. Police learned the ring provided a defense fund for Frank.

A monument to Barbara Fritchie, heroine of Whittier's poem, was erected over her grave in Frederick, Md., September 9, 1914.

Gov. Folsom Hits Big City Emphasis In Radio Programs

By The Associated Press

The Alabama radio audience, in the words of Gov. James E. Folsom, "is a bit weary of getting its culture, comedy and criticism from Hollywood, New York and Chicago."

Furthermore, the Alabama Governor said in a statement presented to the communications commission yesterday, a survey by the Agriculture Department showed that "while news broadcasts ranked first among rural men and women in matter of preference for radio listening, sermons and religious programs and old time music are more important to rural men in the South than such programs are to men in the North and West.

"Southern farm women placed religious programs second to news in listening value, while rural women of the North and West ranked soap operas next to news broadcasts.

The Governor joined farm organizations in urging more radio "primarily for rural listeners."

"With the present allocation of clear channels in the United States, a few people in the large cities are in a fair position to dictate the radio listening habits of over half the people of this country," Folsom said.

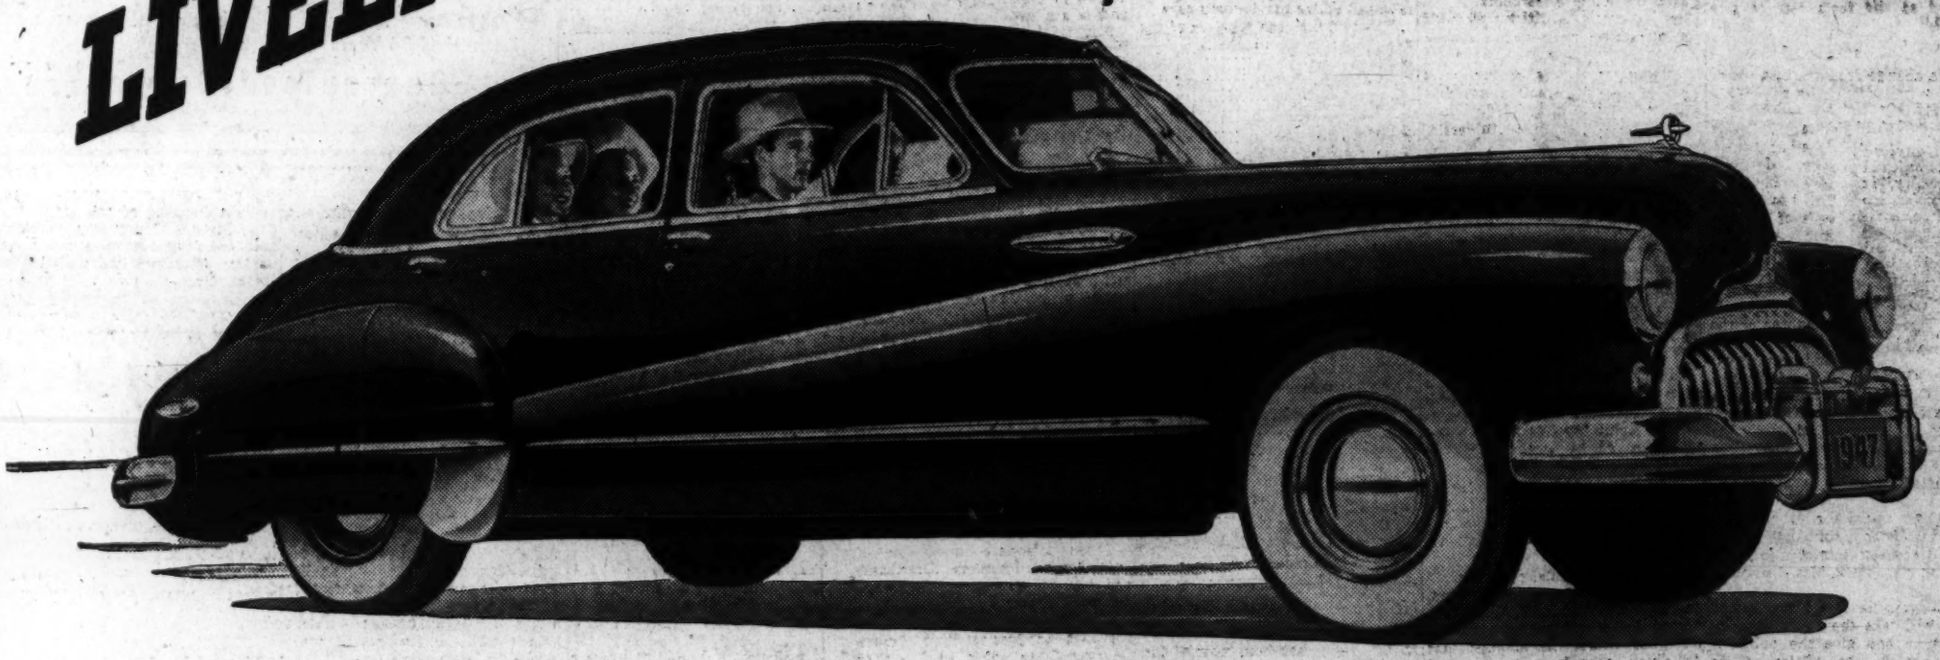
LIVELY NUMBER —with a high Eye Cue



You take this one out on the road—and right away start discovering things.

The thrill you get from Fireball power that makes your wheels kick gravel with the slightest nudge of your treadle foot;

The ease there is in light, sure steering that finds the track and swings into curves with little more than a hand's weight on the steering wheel;

The sense of buoyancy that's yours with four coil springs, one on each wheel, floating you over the dips and rough spots as though they weren't there;

The room you've got in three-person seats — the sureness that's yours from Safety-Ride rims that not only give a softer ride, but check heel-over and sway on curves and spell better car control at all times.

This, you begin to feel, is perfection complete. Surely nothing more can be added to make an automobile more to be desired.

But just look, sir, at what's going on all around you.

The youngsters that point you out from passing cars. The heads that turn to follow your course. The bundle-laden shoppers that check stride for a quick admiring look.

All the eyes that follow the fellow in the car that's setting the style trend.

True — you've a lively number here. But you also have the car with the highest "eye cue" on the American highways — the one that's going to stay out front in the fashion parade.

So why hold off on the chance that something "different" might turn up? Place a firm order now — with or without a car to trade — and we promise you, the Buick you get will be the newest, smartest buy on the market.

Conference Slates Views on Schools

By Murrey Marder

(Third of a series on the Arlington School Board Election.)

A school board which will keep abreast of needs and call for aid of the public in making decisions is urged by a slate of five Arlington school board candidates.

Termed the Arlington School Board Nominating Conference candidates, they were selected by delegates from 51 county groups. They do not claim indorsement of all the groups.

Two Government officials, a civic leader, a businessman and a university professor, they have toured all the county schools to point up situations which they view as "critical."

Principal charges and countercharges in the campaign, which will culminate November 4 when Arlington voters go to the polls to elect county and State officials, have involved this slate and the Greater Arlington Association's five candidates for the school board.

Statistics Presented

Conference candidates' have gathered a barrage of statistics to support demands for more adequate school buildings and recreation facilities. In addition to better classroom and teaching conditions, they urge studies to determine improvements needed, followed by public hearings to weigh the needs, and bond issues to finance necessary improvements.

The candidates and their views are:

Often a spokesman for nominating conference candidates, Barnard Joy is assistant director of the Agriculture Department's extension service.

Formerly one of the 4-H Clubs national leaders, he attended Oregon State College, Cornell and Maryland Universities, and received a doctor's degree in education from George Washington University. Father of four small children, he has lived in Arlington 11 years, is active in church, civic association and P-TA work.

"Arlington is indeed fortunate," says Joy, "for it has a true value (based on 100 per cent valuation) of taxable property of $23,600 per child in average daily attendance in the schools.

"Other cities the same size have property value of $13,700 per child . . . but we spent only $107 per child on education in 1945-46, $50 less than that spent by other cities the same size. We are not advocating higher taxes . . . but studies to determine improvements needed so the facts can be presented."

"The change from an oppointive board to one elected by the voters was only the first step—with that start we must continue this democratic principle," declared Mrs. Elizabeth P. Campbell, wife of the former Arlington County Board chairman.

Mrs. Campbell

Mother of four children, daughter of the bishop of the Southern Province of the Moravian Church, Mrs. Campbell was graduated from Salem College, N. C., received a master's degree from AColumbia University and in 1929 became dean of Mary Baldwin College after teaching at other colleges.

Now an instructor at National Cathedral School for Girls in the District and active in church, child care and civic work, Mrs. Campbell says:

"Arlington needs a school board which will take the public into its confidence and give the public a full voice in the affairs of its schools." She urges "organization of individual school advisory committees as provided by Virginia State law."

Deputy director of personnel for the Federal Security Agency, and active in personnel work for the Tennessee Valley Authority during its early years, O. Glenn Stahl has lived in Arlington more than six years.

Stahl

Born in Indiana, he was graduated from Evansville College there, received a doctor's degree from New York University; he is editor of the technical journal, Personnel Administration. Married to a former school teacher, they have two small children.

He says Arlington needs improved personnel policies for its teachers, adding: "The very fact that the present school administration is trying to frighten teachers is what is wrong with the present system."

Stahl says his slate proposes for teachers "genuine merit" appointments and promotions; job security; a salary scale comparable to other communities and administered impartially.

"Our tours of the schools have disclosed shocking conditions in many of Arlington's 31 schools," said Curtis E. Tuthill, assistant professor of psychology at George Washington University and World War II veteran.

Tuthill

County resident since 1942, Tuthill was born in Minnesota and his mother now teaches in Methodist mission schools. He attended colleges in Illinois and Minnesota, the State University of Iowa and received a doctor of philosophy degree in 1939, the same year his wife received her doctor's degree. Mrs. Tuthill is now a clinical psychologist for the Veterans' Administration.

Tuthill, active in music, civic and veterans' agairs, said:

"At Patrick Henry School, where there are two unused classrooms, one teacher has 41 pupils in the morning and 39 others in the afternoon. At Glen Echo, Hume, Woodlawn, James Madison and Pickett schools each teacher has six groups of pupils . . . lighting is inadequate in many classrooms . . . some schools have litti eor no place for play. . . ."

A builder in the county since 1931, Colin C. MacPherson first came to Arlington in 1910.

Graduated from the University of Virginia in 1925, he was in the Building Materials Division of WPB during World War II; is secretary of the Northern Virginia Builders' Association.

MacPherson

Father of one small child and married to a former Washington-Lee High School teacher, he is past president of Arlington's Lions Club and active in YMCA and Community Chest work.

"I've seen family after family come to Arlington to find a home—and then go somewhere else because of the school situation," he said.

"Arlington businessmen would make a good investment of time, energy and money if they supported better schools . . . In the last four years, the amount that Arlington schools have received out of each tax dollar has decreased 6 cents—from 44 cents to 38."

Proprietor Of Liquor Shop Beaten

SOLOMON GOLDMAN

Sneak Thief Takes $2500 From Till of Food Fair Store

A 56-year-old Washington liquor dealer was beaten brutally yesterday morning but successfully fought off hold-up by a professed jobseeker.

In another reported robbery case here yesterday, a sneak thief successfully made off with between $2500 and $2600 from the till of a Food Fair store, at 1420 7th st. nw., it was reported to police.

Victim of the attempted hold-up assault was Solomon Goldman, 56, of 5536 32d st. nw., owner of the Metro Liquor Store, at 1723 Columbia rd. nw. Twenty stitches were required to close wounds in his head caused by his assailant's blackjack.

Attacked From Behind

Goldman said he was attacked from behind in the rear of his store while directing a substitute handyman in his duties. The handyman, he said, had requested a day's work in the absence of Goldman's regular emplpye.

Goldman tussled with his assailant, who, the store owner said, attempted to take money from his pocket. The assailant fled at Goldman's screams; was chased five blocks by a next-door proprietor of a shoe store, but outdistanced his pursuer.

Treated at Gallinger

The liquor store owner was treated at Gallinger Hospital and released under his doctor's care.

Theft of the cash receipts of the Food Fair store was reported by Henry J. Cohen of 3102 Tennyson st. nw., secretary-treasurer of the corporation. The money, he said, had been prepared for delivery to the company's main office and was taken from the store cash register, left unattended for a few minutes.

He said it represented Saturday's receipts of the 7th st. store.

Printing Head Hits Police On Burglaries

The manager of a local printing firm, reporting nine unsolved burglaries in the past 10 weeks, yesterday charged lack of interest on the part of Metropolitan police.

Norman L. Jones, coowner of Bennett & Williams, 810 North Capitol st., announced that housebreakings at the firm have occurred "with almost clocklike" regularity. Except for Saturday night — when thieves lifted $15 from a petty cash box, most of the thefts have been confined to bottles of coca-cola and small change, Jones said.

"There seems to be negligence on the part of some patrolmen," Jones declared. "I've reported these cases to police on several occasions and they don't seem to be much interested."

He said the police were "more interested in having us burglar-proof our place than in patrolling the beat." He reported police have investigated several times but "they haven's shown any interest in doing anything about it."

Capt. Robert Pearce of the First Precinct, said his officers have investigated all housebreakings reported by the firm and attributed them to "kids work throughout." He said two youngsters were arrested September 29 in connection with one of the thefts and they are awaiting action by Juvenile Court authorities.

Man, Charged With Drunkenness Took 'Shoe' Drink

Arrested in Union Station Saturday on drunk charges while en route to South Carolina, William Roberts, 62, told Judge Armond Scott yesterday that he had had only a bit of gin in Philadelphia before boarding the train.

"It must have been Sloe gin," Judge Scott declared humorously as he released Roberts and William T. Morning of North Carolina, on personal bond. Morning had also been arrested for being drunk.

Speed Asked Of 2 Chest Drive Units

D. C. and Federal Sections' Leaders Urged to Achieve Quotas by Nov. 12

Federal and District Government Community Chest campaign leaders yesterday were urged to strive toward reaching their quotas by November 12, six days after the drive begins.

That day, Government Unit Chairman John Kenney informed 74 officials serving ass volunteers, will be assigned "National Defense Day" in the Fund drive.A meeting to be held at the Chamber of Commerce will be devoted exclusively to receiving reports from Government Unit representatives, he said. The Government Unit quota is $1,357,800 of the $3,900,000 total Chest goal.

The Prince Georges County campaign was launched last night with a "kick-off" dinner at the Varsity Grill in College Park.

Appeals to 75 "Key Men"

Yesterday at the Bureau of Aeronautics in the Navy Department Bldg., a volunteer speaker for the Chest appealed to some 75 "Key men" for the agencies to "have a hand in this good work."

Walter Davidson, executive director of Philippine War Relief of the United States, told volunteer workers:

"Even if you do not need, you have a challenge to do something for the other fellow. The law of compensation will provide for us, if we provide for them."

At another "pep" rally, in the board room of the Army Institute of Pathology, Dr. Earl Franklin Fowler, pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, told workers:

"He who shares blesses three—himself, his neighbors and his God . . . Your attitude in your contribution is the thing that we are most concerned about."

In a letter to his volunteer chairman, Undersecretary of Navy Kenney expressed confidence that "I can depend on your fullest cooperation in this effort." His unit is composed of some 8000 volunteers soliciting gifts from about 200,000 Government workers.

Three prisoners fought it out in a Second Precinct police cell, and one got a broken jaw, police disclosed yesterday.

The three were being held as fugitives of justice from Prince Georges County, Md., where they face charges of assault and robbery on two Washington students, police said.

In Gallinger Hospital last night was William Fabianick, 25, of 1410 Girard st. nw., with a fractured jaw. Police said he refused to waive extradition to Prince Georges County.

In Prince Georges County Jail in default of $500 bail was James Walter Balderson, 19, plumber, of 6503 Davis st., Maryland Park, Md. Balderson waived extradition after the Sunday cell fight, police said.

In a police headquarters cell was the third man, Henry Gordon Bryant, 21, of 1414 Girard st. nw. He too, refused to waive extradition, police said.

The three were arrested here Sunday on complaint of Laird K. Osborn, 22, of Topeka, Kans., and Richard J. Lang of Lorain, Ohio, both studying in Washington. Osborn was identified as a student at George Washington University and Lang as a student at the Lewis Hotel Training School.

E Street Bus Proposal Stirs 3-Way Fight

Citizens Divided As Store Owners Urge New Route

A three-way dispute developed yesterday over proposed restoration of prewar bus service along E st. nw. to the 7th st. shopping area in a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission in the District Building.

Store owners urged the additional bus service. Capital Transit officials opposed it. Citizens were divided on the plan.

Mark Lansburgh, of Lansburgh and Bro., speaking also for the Hecht Co. and for S. Kann Sons Co., urged restoration of the prewar routing along E st. of the Chillum, Connecticut ave., Petworth and 16th st. bus lines.

Lansburg said the request for extension of bus service on these lines to the 7th st. shopping area was based on complaints of customers and employes that the present routing is inconvient.

Transit opposition to the proposal was voiced by E. D. Merrill, and Dean J. Locke, engineer, of the Capital Transit Co. Locke said the three stores are now served by lines which carry 67 per cent of the passengers entering the downtown shopping area on street cars and buses during the mid-day shopping period. Locke said the extension would require 34 more buses, the same additional number of operators, and would cost the company estimated $216,554 annually.

Among witnesses for citizens groups were: George Corbin, Manor Park; Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, Columbia Heights; Cyrus T. Bright, Chillum Heights; Harvey O. Craver, Petworth; Harry C. Grove and David Babp, Connecticut ave.; and J. B. Dickman, jr., North Cleveland Park.

Arlington Woman Elceted World Official of YWCA

Mrs. J. Birdsall Calkins, 1112 North Evergreen st., Arlington, Va., has been elected a vice president of the World Council of the Young Women's Christian Association, according to an Associated Press dispatch yesterday from Hangchow, China, where the council just concluded its first session since before the war.

Mrs. Calkins

Miss Lilace R. Barnes of Lake Forest, Ill., president of the Chicago YMCA and a member of the national board, was elected president, and Miss Catherine Picot of Geneva, Switzerland, treasurer.

Mrs. Calkins, who has been president of the Young Women's Christian Associations of the United States since 1943, has been associated with the YWCA for 25 years both in Rochester, N. Y., and in Washington. She is the mother of three daughters.

Cyanamid Company Appeals $25 Fine

Livingston, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—The American Cyanamid Company plant at Piney River appealed a $25 fine imposed by Nelson County Trial Justice J. B. Massie here today on a charge of stream pollution, which has been pending before the court about two months.

The case was the second against the company in less than a year, according to Trial Justice Massie. The first case, in which a $25 fine was made, is now before the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals where the defendants referred the issue after the Nelson County Circuit Court sustained the trial justice's verdict.

School Children to Collect Food for Shipment Overseas

Children of 14 District schools are preparing to do their part in passing up sweets on "Beggars' Night" Thursday in favor of collecting nutritious foods for shipment overseas.

The campaign began in the William Powell Elementary School, 14th and Upshur sts. nw., at the suggestion of Mrs. Ruth T. Nelson, wife of the Rev. Clarence T. Nelson, pastor of Augustana Lutheran Church.

Yesterday 13 additional schools of the third division, headed by Miss Katherine Scrivener, director, joined in the drive. On Sunday several church congregations in the area heard sermons on the program and Parent-Teacher Associations of the schools began publicizing the forthcoming collection.

The schools are Shepherd, Bancroft, Raymond, Petworth, Barnard, Whittier, Keene, Rudolph, Truesdale, Allison Health, Brightwood, West, Takoma and Powell.

Mrs. Nelson, who explained the program to the Powell youngsters yesterday morning, said the foods collected by the pupils would be sent to the Gin-Ling College at Nanking, China.

Foods collected by the other schools will be divided among the Jewish joint distribution committee SOS collection, the war relief services collection of the National Catholic Welfare conference and the women's council drive of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Living in Squalor

8 Children Taken From Mother, 33

A court order yesterday took eight children away from their 33-year-old mother and placed them in foster homes.

All are under 16. The youngest is less than one year.

Appalling conditions of filth and squalor in their abandoned schoolhouse home on Powder Mill rd., brought the mother a year's suspended sentence; gave her six months to prove she is capable of caring for the children properly.

The mother, Mrs. Vera Palmer, told Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens in Hyattsville Police Court, she is "willing to do anything possible . . . to get the children back."

Today, in custody of Probation Officer Roy Bright, she is to begin the first of her efforts to regain custody of the children. Bright was directed to find employment for her; teach her something of home cleanliness and sanitation.

Police and sanitary officials testified mattresses on broken beds in the converted schoolhouse were filthy; no cooking utensils were found and there is no apparent source of water.

Mrs. Palmer, who, police said, cannot read or write, was arrested October 8 on drunk and disorderly charges and was fined $25 in Hyattsville Police Court. In the interim, Mrs. Agnes Duvall, supervisor of county aid, had inspected the house and sworn out a warrant charging neglect of the children.

The father, who is in West Virginia, recently agreed to pay $70 per month for their support. The family has been receiving $178 monthly in dependent child care. Cost of maintaining them in foster homes would be $3000 a year, officials said.

The magistrate's action came despite opinions of Mrs. Dorothy Ogburn, executive director of the Welfare Board and of Case Worker Mrs. Elizabeth Cartendafner that the mother should have custody of the children.

A ninth child, a daughter, 16, is married.

Case workers told Magistrate Owens that conditions had not been so bad as pictured when they visited the house on several occasions.

Man Found Guilty Here Of Sex Crime

'Physical Culturist' Involved in Case Against Girl, 14

James Matthews, 37, self-styled physical culturist, was yesterday found guilty here of carnal knowledge in a case involving a 14-year-old girl who roomed at his house, at 3944 Benning rd. ne.

A District Court jury of eight men and four women returned the verdict after two hours' deliberations. Since the jury made no recommendation of the death penalty, Matthews faces possible sentence of 10 to 30 years imprisonment.

Judge Richmond B. Keech did not set a date for sentencing.

Prosecutor in the case was Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz.

Public Hearing Attracts No One At Richmond

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—A public hearing on the reorganization of the State Government was called to order at 11:12 a. m. today.

Former United States Senator Thomas G. Burch stared at the vacant faces of the audience and adjourned the session at 11:13.

The faces were vacant because here was no audience there. Nary a soul showed up to offer suggestions to a State Commission on how the commonwealth's array of departments and agencies might be reorganized for administrative purposes.

Burch told his commission members, however, that their work was just beginning. He said preliminary surveys had been completed by the Griffenhagen associates, professional counselors on public administration, and by State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett, who is serving as commission secretary.

From now until the general assembly convenes in January, Burch said, "we will have plenty to do."

Truck Kills Man, Baby Dies Under Family Car

Mother Runs Over Daughter When Door Opens; County Employe Is Victim

A 61-year-old man and a 10-month-old child were injured fatally yesterday in two Greater Washington traffic accidents.

Thomas W. Sasscer, of 1116 St. Paul st., Baltimore, a construction inspector for the Prince Georges County engineer's office, died in Casualty Hospital yesterday afternoon after being struck by a truck at 49th st. and Addison Chapel rd., Beaver Heights, Md.

Peggy Ann Ward, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ward, of Hoadley, Prince William County, Va., was killed early yesterday when she fell under the right front wheel of an automobile driven by her mother.

According to police, Sasscer was struck when a cinder-loaded truck driven by George H. Samuels, 27, of 306 2d st. sw., crashed into the back of his car while he stood beside it inspecting road work.

Samuels is being held in Prince Georges County Police Station for bond of $1000 on a manslaughter charge and another $1000 on a charge of reckless driving by colliding. Samuels, according to police, said his brakes failed to hold.

Police said the Ward infant fell beneath the wheels of the car driven by her mother after a door came open while the car was backing out of the driveway.

State Trooper E. H. Howe said Mrs. Ward rushed the child to Alexandria Hospital but it was pronounced dead on arrival.

Mrs. Ward was going to the home of her husband's parents at Woodbridge with the family laundry when the accident occurred. Ward is a filling station operator at Woodbridge. The infant was their only child, according to Trooper Howe.

Washington Is Promised Rain Today

Rain—that substance which has brought ice-sowing airplanes into hopeful prominence recently—is due in Washington today.

The area, with only .02 of an inch of rain in 32 days, will be dampened down slightly with brief showers moving in from the west and southwest, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

Parts of Ohio, eastern Kentucky, eastern Tennessee and the southern Appalachians, which have been about as thirsty as we have, were having showers yesterday and last night.

Mild temperatures are slated today, with a high of 74 degrees under partly cloudy skies. A slight temperature drop is due after the rain.

Police Chief Takes No Chances, Puts Gaming Evidence in Bank

With a county grand jury probing possibilities of a police tieup with gamblers, Arlington County Police Chief Harry Woodyard is taking no chances of losing police gaming evidence.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy, Arlington County Circuit Court, disclosed late yesterday that the police chief's caution delayed jury consideration of evidence seized in the raid on the home of Russell "Peanuts" Scheele.

The evidence requested, Judge McCarthy said, was locked up in an Arlington bank vault and the bank closed for the day.

It was the raid on Scheele's home, on complaint of a private citizen, that touched off events leading to the jury probe to determine if there was collusion between gamblers and law enforcement officers in the county.

The Schele evidence, including cash and checks totalling $2500, will be available for study by the jurors at 10 a. m. today when they begin their fifth day of sessions on the investigation, Chief Woodyard declared.

Scheele pleaded guilty to operating an illegal lottery, and received a sentence of $750 fine and five months in jail.

The jurors yesterday questioned 15 more witnesses, all but three being members of the police force.

At the close of the day, the grand jury ordered summons issued for two more witnesses, bringing to 37 the total of persons called in connection with the investigation. The new witnesses are Detective Sergt. Dudley Rector and Detective Louis Elliott.

Witnesses called by the grand jury yesterday included Capt. Ernest Miller, head of the county's traffic bureau; Sergt. Lynn Smith, Sergt. T. W. Frederick and Pvts. H. E. Mason, Harvey Barnett, Roy Barber, Henry Willett, William Fawver, George Coppage, A. E. Bayliss, Walter Kadel and William S. Fowler, all of the police department; William McShea, a former member of the County Board; Henry Sutton, a painter, and William Thompson, a retired Navy Department worker.

The jury excused Police Pvt. William West, after he presented a medical certificate showing he was recuperating from a recent operation and was not in condition to testify.

Area News in Brief

Phone Alibi Sounds Too Phony to Cop

The Ninth Precinct's Pvt. Harry Black reasoned that even an amorous youth wouldn't talk two hours on the same telephone to the same girl.

On that assumption—and the fact that Billie Gustavson, 19, of 608 H st. ne., was found in the phone booth of Baker's Grill, 615 H st. ne., two hours after it closed—Black arrested the youth.

Gustavson told police he stepped into the phone booth shortly before the midnight closing hour and talked with the girl two hours. Black also telephoned the girl, he said, and learned Gustavson hadn't.

The youth pleaded guilty to unlawful entry and was freed on $300 bond for sentencing November 12.

Under the Soil Conservation Act, a public hearing is held on the petition and land owners in the area vote on it before a conservation district can be set up.

Mr. Morris

Mr. Morris, 69, of McLean, died in Arlington Hospital of injuries suffered Saturday in an automobile accident.

Carl A. Marshall, Eighth District Republican chairman, said last night "a movement is growing to indorse a prominent independent as a write-in candidate." It is now too late to substitute another name on the ballot, Marshall said.

Bryan, chairman of the County Republican committee, was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol. He was released under $500 bond for hearing Friday.

Mr. Morris, a building contractor, was former chairman of the county Republican committee and had been a resident of Fairfax County for 30 years. He was born in Greene County, Va.

In Memoriam

MONEY, LENORA V. In loving and everlasting memory of my dear mother who departed this life five years ago today, October 28, 1942.
How sad our troubled heart,
How dim our eyes with tears,
For death has robbed us of a pal
I thought we would have for years.
Surrounded by friends we are lonely,
In midst of joys we are blue,
With a smile on our face we have heartaches
Thinking dear mother of you.
SON AND DAUGHTER-IN-LAW,
CEDRIC AND ELLA.

MONEY, LENORA V. In sad and loving remembrance of my dear mother and grandmother, LENORA V. MONEY, who passed away five years ago today, October 28, 1942.
Just a loving thought,
Just a silent tear,
Just a beautiful memory
Of a mother we loved so dear.
DEVOTED DAUGHTER,
CHARLIE AND SPONNIE.

On Hallowe'en

'Ghost' Asks RSVP to Party At Wit's End

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE BEST kept secret since the Normandy invasion centers around a mysterious Halloween party. A snappy Washington cross section has received black-bordered invitations printed ghoulishly:

"The late Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Ware request the pleasure of your company at a ghastly affair in honor of (your name's inserted here) on the stroke of ten October thirty-first at the deserted rectory, Wit's End, Upper Marlboro. Come dressed fit to kill (ginghams!). R. S. V. P. your ghost and ghostess P. O. Box 3567, Washington, D. C."

A map is enclosed, with X marking the deserted rectory. Some of the invitees, fearing the whole setup's a gag, have banded together, hired a bus to tool them to Wit's End. Another intriguing fillip is a dinner invitation, ghost and ghostess equally unknown, in Room 13 of the Hay Adams!

By and For Children

VIOLET HEMING, blonde and sveltely beautiful as ever, is guest speaker today at the Children's Theater of Washington luncheon. Miss Heming played her first lead role with the Columbia Theater Players; her last here, too, in "Kiss and Tell." Now she's happily wrapped in domesticity as wife of Justice of the United States Court of Appeals, Bennett Champ Clark, son of colorful Champ Clark, many years Speaker of the House.

The Children's Theater, though it started less than a year ago, has been a gratifying success. Under wing of the District Recreation Department, children's plays are given by children for children. The advisory committee's chairman, Mrs. Rose Robison Cowen, directed last season's shows, and though only six performances were given, $1100 was cleared. Right now the plays are presented in the Roosevelt High School Auditorium, but eventually the proceeds will go toward a small, efficient theater directed by a professional. On the list this year is "Peter Pan" and a marionette show.

Miss Heming, alias Mrs. Clark, believes the coming generation is not sufficiently theater-conscious, that children's theaters build up a potential audience, keep them from becoming too Hollywood-minded. Besides, acting is a marvelous way to keep children occupied, lets them work off any incipient emotional phobias. The young actors, incidentally, are gathered from Washington's schools.

Decorated by La Watling

QUITE THE most ingenious attention attractor we know belongs to a pal of former OPA chief, Paul Porter. The gent, who shall remain nameless, is an Atlanta lawyer—and, naturally, steeped in "Gone With the Wind" lore. When conversation lags, he snaps out a handsome gold watch, flips back its cover. There, neatly incised, is a fascinating inscription: "In grateful appreciation for services rendered. Belle Watling."

Now, in "GWTW," Bell Watling ran what is delicately called a "sporting house." So those scanning the inscription either arch a refined eyebrow or curl a lewd lip—forgetting, of course, that La Watling was a purely fictitious character!

It's an elaborate hoax, but you'd be surprised how many stories this department has heard about the valuable services rendered by Mr. X's father to Atlanta's dream girl, the tough but heart o' gold Belle Watling.

French-Greek Alliance

HOW the Greeks do marry the French, and the French marry the Greeks! Right in the French Embassy Mmes. Bonnet, Charles-Roux and Claudel are Greek; now, turn about, the wife of the recently arrived Greek Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Constantin Tsaldaris, is French.

Up from the United Nations, the Tsaldaris' will remain in Washington a few days for the usual dinners and luncheons, polished off Wednesday with a reception at the Greek Embassy. Mme. Tsaldaris, once famed as a beauty, may renew friendships made here years ago when she was Mme. Schliemann, daughter-in-law of the famed archeologist who excavated the site of ancient Troy.

The Schliemanns, born German, were made honorary Greek citizens, spent much of their lives in Greece. M. Tsaldaris heads the most numerous Greek political party, served as Prime Minister last year. He's a cheerful, cigar smoking individual, much liked by even the most casual acquaintances.

Heading the receiving line with Mrs. Truman were Dr. Margaret Haynes Sebree, vice president of the national league and Mrs. Kyle Booth, president of the Alexandria branch.

Parties Mark Czech, Iranian Anniversaries

By Elizabeth Maguire

ON the 28th birthday of the Shah of Persia yesterday and the 29th anniversary of the independence of Czechoslovakia, two equally delightful parties were given at the respective embassies. Diplomatic and residential society attended the functions betwen 5 and 7:30 o'clock.

At the Iranian Embassy, doors leading to the gardens were thrown wide open. Red and orange flowers grew alongside the clipped box hedge, and inside the embassy masses of giant white chrysanthemums and red roses were placed about the rooms.

The Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Noury-Esfandiary received their guests in the drawing room.

Col. G. E. Prior Palmer, who got back from London Friday, told of his engagement to lovely Lady Doreen Hope, youngest daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Linlithgow. The Marquis is the former Viceroy of India. Colonel Palmer will be married in England in December and he will bring his bride to this country in January.

The Minister of Syria and Mme. El-Khouri were there. The Minister said he had visited with the Shah and the Empress in Tehran in 1945, on his way to and from Moscow.

Cocktailing together were the Minister of Saudi-Arabia, Sheikh Asad Al-Faqih, and Edgar Morris.

Other guests at the party included Rear Admiral and Mrs. James H. Foskett, the Ambassador of Italy and Signora Tarchiani, Capt. and Mrs. P. W. W. Wootten, R. N., Brigadier Juan Luis Garramendy of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Garramendy, the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais, the Charge d'Affaires of Pakistan and Mrs. Baig, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, and Walter Tuckerman.

OVER at the Czechoslovakian Embassy hundreds of guests were received by the Ambassador and Mme. Slavik, and their guest of honor, Jan Masaryk, the Czechoslovakian Minister of Foreign Affairs. Attractive Mme. Slavik wore a long black dress with pearl choker and a single red rose pinned at her shoulder.

Mme. van Kleffins, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, wore a lovely chapeau from Paris, a black velvet beret, with her new two-piece black silk suit. She and the Ambassador, she said, will go to Ann Arbor, Mich., this weekend where the Ambassador will receive an honorary degree from the University. From there they will go to New York to welcome the Nieuw Amsterdam, on her first voyage since the war.

The Minister of Australia, Alfred Stirling, and his sister, Miss Dorothy Stirling, were at the party, and the Canadian Naval Attache and Mrs. Pemberton.

Anastasi—Ofano

Miss Johanna Ofano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Ofano of Washington, was married Saturday to Placid Anthony Anastasi, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Placid A. Anastasi of Decatur Heights, Md. The double ring ceremony took place at 4 o'clock at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, the Rev Paul Repetti officiating.

Escorted by her father, the bride was gowned in white satin with bustle back and marquisette yoke trimmed in lace. Her full length veil of illusion fell from a tiara of seed pearls, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias.

Miss Mary Lou Mainhall attended her as maid of honor, and Mrs. Mary Anastasi, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. One was gowned in dusty yellow and the other in rose faille. The bridesmaids, Miss Rosalie Webb, Miss Dorothy Marcone, cousin of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Rose Celia, were gowned in blue, pink and aqua faille. All wore matching headpieces and carried matching bouquets.

The flower girls, Marie Elena Dauphin, cousin of the bride, and Mary Jane Jannetti, niece of the bridegroom, were dressed in blue gowns and carried baskets of rose petals.

John Anastasi was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Giulio Ofano and Ray Ofano, brothers of the bride, Romeo Regil, cousin of the bridegroom and Leslie Goodman. Richard Anthony Maiolatesi, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

After a wedding trip to Miami Beach, the couple will make their home in Washington.

Chickering—Wolfe

At Fifth Air Force Headquarters at Nagoya, Japan, Miss Beverly Ray Wolfe, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. K. B. Wolfe, became the bride of First Lieut. John Bradley Chickering, October 11 at the base chapel. The bridegroom is the son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William E. Chickering of Toledo, Ohio.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white net and lace with a fingertip veil falling from a tiara of seed pearls. She carried white orchids.

The matron of honor was Mrs. William Phillips, whose husband, Captain Phillips, is aide de camp to General Wolfe. She wore yellow marquisette with a yellow headdress and lace mitts and carried white and yellow chrysanthemums. Mrs. James W. Strain of Marfa and San Antonio, Tex., and Miss Barbara Yeager of Dayton, Ohio, were the other attendants, gowned in aqua marquisette with matching headbands and lace mitts. They carried heart-shaped nosegays of yellow and white chrysanthemums. Miss Judy Predmore of Denver, Colo., was flower girl.

Lieut. Hal Fitzpatrick, San Antonio, Tex., was best man and the ushers were Lieut. Chester Braun, San Antonio; Capt. B. E. W. Benson, Worcester, Mass., and Capt. John Werner of San Antonio.

A reception was held at Fifth Air Force Officers' Club after which the couple departed for a wedding stay at Fuji New Grand Hotel. They plan to live at Yokota Air Base.

The bride was graduated from Miami University at Oxford, Ohio, and has taught kindergarten at Nagoya Dependent School for a year. The bridegroom was graduated from United States Military Academy at West Point in 1945 and is now with the public information office at Yokota Base.

Russler—Quadow

Before a small assembly of relatives and friends, Miss Jacqueline M. Quadow was married to William Russler October 12. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Leonard Quadow and the late Mr. Quadow of this city and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Russler of New York City.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother following the ceremony after which the couple left for a wedding trip to Great Smoky Mountains, Florida and Nassau. They will reside in Washington.

Zita Asks D. C. Clubwomen To Aid Starving Austrians

By Genevieve Reynolds

Three and four-year-old children look like 9-month-old babes . . . 6 out of 10 babies born die in their first year . . . neither men nor women can concentrate on jobs—all because of hunger. This is the bleak, grim picture in starving Austria painted by the former Empress of Austria before members of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday at their first fall meeting held in the Hamilton Hotel.

"Ninety per cent of the entire population is undernourished," former Empress Zita explained. "Practically everybody is from 40 to 60 pounds underweight. No one has more than a modicum of resistance to diseases."

The speaker said that the Austrians are better fed in the American zone of occupation than in any of the others, but still lack the necessary food. "In the Russian zone of occupation people worry, 'Will I be alive tomorrow?' " said the former Austrian Empress; "in the French, American and Birtish zones, they simply wonder, 'Will I be alive and free, as I am today?' "

Calling upon the American women to help save the starving children and mothers of Austria, she said that in addition to food they need warm clothing and shoes.

Prior to the former Empress' speech, Howard P. Bailey, assistant to the managing editor of the Evening Star, gave a talk on public relations.

At a business session earlier in the day, the local federation introduced a motion calling upon the General Federation of Women's Clubs to start a Nation-wide campaign protesting the amount of materials now being used in clothes, and urging that the materials be saved to help the peoples of Europe.

Another resolution adopted advocated a "promotional campaign" for a strong National Guard in the District of Columbia. Three previous resolutions adopted by the organization were reaffirmed. They included "approbation of a sales tax for the District; removal of the tax on oleomargarine; an amendment to the A.B.C. law to prevent packaged liquor from being sold on holidays and a law prohibiting the sale of beer or any other alcoholic beverages to children in restaurants—even when accompanied by their parents." Again the federation voted a motion opposing daylight saving time unless made universal in the States.

Two new organizations were welcomed in the federation—the Philippines Women's Club of Washington of which Mrs. Juan Baretto is president and the Navy Mothers' Club, headed by Mrs. Eva M. Carr.

Cost

The cost of any article . . . Is not the selling price . . . But whether and to what extent . . . We make a sacrifice . . . It is not very high if we . . . Can well afford to pay . . . And it is merely something that . . . Contributes to our play . . . But if we really need it and . . . Our cash is rather low . . . The cost appears exorbitant . . . As purchase prices go . . . Of course there is a value that . . . The market seems to set . . . And that decides to some degree . . . The treatment that we get . . . But generally the costs depends . . . On being rich or poor . . . And just how much our pocketbook . . . is able to endure.

Play Acting May Help Cry Baby

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The crying of a child who is old enough for reasoning is hard for the mother to endure. She wants to be sweet and reasonable and understanding, but if her efforts are met with freshets of tears she soon loses patience.

Mrs. J. L. P. says her 4½-year-old is a large, well-developed boy who sleeps and eats well but is a terrible cry-baby.

"Even if I tell him to wash his hands at mealtime, he will start off and then whine or literally cry, 'No, I won't.'

"He is overly affectionate compared to our 6-year-old girl. About 18 months ago, he was struck by an automobile and had legs and pelvis broken and a badly cut head and face. He was in the hospital for four weeks and 2½ months in bed. He was not unreasonable about wanting attention then. But since, we have thought first one thing then another was the matter with him. He isn't sick but he is awkward, falls a lot and always has a bandage on him. Perhaps this is one reason he frets so much.

"Our little girl never cried so we wonder if this is special with him, or the way other children act. He isn't spoiled and we try not to show favoritism—as actually there is none."

There are several observable reasons. His development had a severe setback and he may still be acting as he might have in the earlier negativistic period. Crying is typical behavior of the ages from 2 to 4. But, after that, it should be outgrown.

His illness, which was an emotional as well as physical injury, might well leave this residue of easy tears as an illustration of it.

Also, if he falls easily, it might be that one of his legs does not measure exactly the same length as the other. Have you had them measured since his illness? This would encourage awkwardness and the wounds he gets would add to his general sense of injury at having to endure so much pain.

You may, to help him, couch your orders more imaginatively so he feels himself acting a role and is interested in it. Humdrum ceremonies like getting cleaned up before meals might have added interest if the child would play he was a visitor, or take on the behavior of some animal who washes up diligently (a cat), thus seeing himself as something other than a small boy who is always carrying out some adult's orders. Try it.

Man's Habit of Inviting Guests to Dinner Without Consulting Wife Led to Imbroglio Last Week When She Turned One Couple Away

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband has a habit of inviting people to dinner and letting me know later. Sometimes he tells me a day in advance of their coming; more often he waits until the very day.

In the past I've always done my best on short notice; but last week we had a disagreeable incident over this.

In speaking of another couple, I mentioned that I wanted to have them to dinner some day, but I definitely didn't set a date, as I haven't been well and am still under a doctor's care, and also I was planning a family dinner for the weekend, to celebrate our wedding anniversary.

However, my husband took it upon himself to ask the couple to this dinner. He figured I would manage, as usual. Instead, I told him to call and cancel the invitation, explaining why I was having "only family" that evening. He said he would and I said we'd have them to dinner soon.

Tried to Put Wife on Spot

HE CALLED at their home and telephoned me from there, saying in effect, "Well dear, it's all settled; they are coming for dinner tomorrow night." I was dumfounded and replied, "But I thought we had already discussed this——."

Before I could say more, he handed the telephone to his friend's wife, who said she'd be so glad to come to dinner. Although confused and upset, I pulled myself together and said I was truly sorry, that I meant to ask them to dinner soon, but had no plans for them that weekend, and explained my reasons as best I could.

The fact of my ill health should have been enough of itself, to win her understanding, but she seemed offended. She said she understood she had been invited by both of us, and that if her husband issued an invitation she would feel obliged to back it up.

Since then my husband's attitude is unbearable and I do believe these people hold me at fault. They seem to think that regardless of misunderstanding and short notice, I should have had them and made the best of it. Is that your opinion? Please tell me what I should have done. V. P.

Wife's Stand Was Justified

DEAR V. P.: From first to last of your husband's attempt to railroad these people into dinner against your wishes, you performed splendidly.

When he tried to strong-arm you by telephone, you did exactly right in standing your ground. Moreover, the manner in which you voiced regret at misunderstanding and explained the situation to the friend's wife was in perfect taste. Her "offended" retort was vulgarity personified.

Never mind if your husband's attitude has been unbearable since then. Certainly you contributed nothing to the incident for which you need apologize. He was disloyal to you and dishonest all around. He tried your patience too far, not knowing the limit had been reached, put himself out on a limb and got sawed off. Fine. Dandy. May it serve as a lasting lesson to him to show more respect for his wife, also the truth in future.

Man's a Piker And Four-Flusher

ASSUMING these people are nursing a grudge, holding you at fault, they aren't worthy of solicit-our consideration. They don't deserve to be called friends; and if you never see nor hear from them again, it will be no loss.

As I get the picture, your husband is a four-flusher; a man with little to offer who likes to put on a show of being a good fellow. He knows you are a wonderful cook and he trades on that to keep his social stock up. He's too selfish to care about the labor and strain his piker-ostentation heaps on you, —hence I daresay your rebellion last week was long overdue.

M. H.

A Word to the Chubby

Those Curves May Be Inherited But Not Extra Pounds of Fat

By Ida Jean Kain

Everybody knows that overeating leads to waist. But what is not easy to understand, and very tough to take, is why you personally gain weight while not overeating. The usual complaint is that you pile on pounds on far less food than your friendly Milly Jones, who lives down the street. It's certainly puzzling, to say the least, the way she can eat and yet stay slender. And so you conclude that you come by your weight naturally.

Well, it's this way . . . a number of things figure in individual calorie requirements. Body build, temperament and the amount of active tissue are all factors. If you are short and inclined to curves, and Milly is tall and slim, even though you both weighed exactly the same, Milly could eat more food without gaining. It doesn't seem fair, but it's true. A tall, thin person has more active tissue in proportion to weight. Much of the weight of a short, plump person is in fatty tissues. It is only active tissue and glands that burn calories. Fatty tissue is inert and burns very few calories. Even though you weigh more than your taller friend, you do not require as much food to keep going.

Chances are you have a wonderful disposition. You're easy-going and cheerful, even in the morning before having coffee. Secretly your husband thinks he's married to the finest little woman in the world, and wouldn't change you, even though he may do a little good natured kidding about his chubby wife. And your cooking can't be beaten, and how he brags about that.

Well, we can't have everything. With your build and temperament you inherited a tendency to put on excess weight easily, but you also inherited a tendency to a sunny disposition. And although with your build you couldn't be slim and healthy and happy, you can, through your food habits, control your weight so as never to go beyond pleasingly plump. Fat itself is never inherited. You may argue that the tendency amounts to the same thing, but it doesn't. You can't be overweight for your build if you stay within your moderate calorie requirements.

Keep your food pattern simple and steer clear of sauces, fats and gravies and rich carbohydrates. That doesn't mean no desserts, but make a game of having dessert twice a week only. The other time choose fruits. You may even prefer it, once the habit is established. With your nice disposition, anything can be fun if you take a gay attitude toward it.

Make Peace With Child

Make peace with the child who has been punished for a wrongdoing before the little one tries to go to sleep. Talk it all out quietly at the bedside if matters are still chaotic by that time, but leave the child with a comforting sense of forgiveness so she can relax and get to sleep quickly. The child put to sleep with a threat of future punishment will never have a restful night.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

When I was married I received an electric table broiler. It has never been used and looks absolutely new. I wonder if you know of any place that this can be sold, as I never expect to use it. It was sent from out of town and I do not know from what store it came. Since I do not live in the city, it would be difficult to sell it through an ad. K. W. M.

If the broiler is a standard make, you may be able to trade it in at some electrical shop for an appliance more in keeping with your needs. "Or perhaps you can take it to the Swap Shop on Wisconsin ave. nw., in Washington, and find something there you'd like to trade it for.

My sister has given me six coffee cups which she tells me came from the old British legation in Washington. There is a deep stain all over the bottom of several, presumably from coffee left standing in them too long. My sister tried everything to remove it and I have used turpentine, household cleanser and other agents without success. Do you think it's possible to get rid of the stain? M. M.

You may be able to remove the stain with a chlorine bleach. Make a weak solution of the bleach (about one part bleach to three parts water) and let it stand in the cups overnight. If stain still remains, repeat the process.

I have a dozen ribbed goblets which are iridescent. I know that these are old, but I am having difficulty in my endeavor to identify them. Can you help me? G. M.

Have you enlisted the aid of a reliable antique dealer in identifying the glasses? There are also experts at the Smithsonian Institution (room 350, Natural History Building) who can help you. An actual inspection of the glasses would be necessary to make a really satisfactory identification.

Can you tell me how to get the shine off the underside of a lilac crepe dress? I want to let the hem down, but find the under hem very shiny from being pressed on the wrong side. F. B. C.

If water don't spot the fabric, pressing through a damp cloth, then rubbing with a piece of Turkish toweling may help take off the shine. Or a commercial dry cleaner may be able to remove some of it with steam. Sponging with a vinegar and water solution often removes shine, but I'd experiment with it first on a part of the dress that won't show to be sure it won't affect the light color of the fabric.

Can you tell me how to dry, treat, and color flowers for permanent decorative purposes? S. B. V.

The book "Flower Arrangements for the American Home" (Taber and Kistner) has suggestions along this line which should be helpful. It is obtainable in book stores and most public libraries.

My baby received a satin comforter filled with duck down as a gift. Can you tell me the proper care and treatment for it? S. K. H.

Thick, luxuriant comforters filled with down or feathers are not washable. Dry cleaning is the only method recommended for them. It's a good idea to baste a binding of soft muslin several inches deep along the edge of the comforter. That will keep it clean much longer and lengthen its life by shielding the edges from wear. When packing comforter away, place it loosely in a box with a generous amount of moth crystals. Then wrap the box in heavy paper and seal the edges to make them airtight. This method of packing will preserve the fluffiness of the comforter and protect it from moth attacks. If packed down too tightly, the down may lose some of its resiliency.

Peace Plate Menu, Liver for Dinner Tonight

Menus for "Peace Plates" today and tomorrow—featuring Savory Liver and Swedish Meat Balls—have been suggested by the Citizens Food Committee. Liver rates the menu for dinner tonight because the variety meats—liver, kidneys, sweetbreads, and the like—aren't included in the "Meatless Tuesday" ban. The Swedish Meat Balls for tomorrow combine chuck beef, one of the cheaper cuts, with leftover bread.

TONIGHT'S MENU
Savory Liver
Mashed yellow turnips
Applesauce
Peanut Butter Cookies

The recipe for savory liver follows:

2 pounds beef liver in one piece
3 peeled large onions
6 tablespoons fat
¼ cup flour
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 cup sour cream
½ cup water

Cut liver in slices 1 inch thick. Slice onions thin and brown in a skillet with 4 tablespoons of the fat. Remove onions from the skillet. Rub flour into liver and brown in same skillet with remaining 2 tablespoons fat. Add salt, paprika, browned onions, sour cream and water. Cover, place over low heat; simmer gently about 1½ hours, or until tender, turning once. Serves 6. To serve 2 or 3, make one-half this recipe. If you wish, you may use the more tender pork or lamb's liver and saute quickly in a skillet.

WEDNESDAY'S MENU
Swedish Meat Balls
Boiled Potatoes in Jackets
Carrots and String Beans
Baked Lemon Pudding

Here's how to prepare the Swedish meat balls:

¾ pound ground chuck beef
¾ cup fine dried bread crumbs
¼ cup minced onion
¾ teaspoon cornstarch
Dash of allspice
1 egg, slightly beaten
¾ cup milk
1¼ teaspoons salt
¼ cup fat
3 tablespoons flour
3 cups water
3 bouillon cubes
⅛ teaspoon pepper

In a mixing bowl combine the first 7 ingredients and ¾ teaspoon of the salt. Shape into 30 or 32 small balls, using a rounded teaspoonful of mixture for each. Brown the balls, not too many at a time, in the heated fat in a skillet; transfer to a plate to keep warm as they are browned. Then prepare the sauce as follows:

Blend flour with fat remaining in skillet. Stir in water, bouillon cubes, the remaining ½ teaspoon salt, and pepper. Cook, while stirring, until smooth. Arrange meat balls in sauce; cover, and simmer 30 minutes. Serves 6.

One on the Aisle—

Metternich Muffed

Stage History Repeats at C. U.

By Richard L. Coe

IN TURNING TO historical drama, Catholic University's speech and drama department has come a cropper.

The play is "Rebel's Empire," a drama about Prince Metternich by Victoria Kuhn. Successes in this field of depicting historical persons on the stage are more the exception than the rule. For every "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "Mary of Scotland" and "Elizabeth the Queen," there are tens of scripts unwept, unhonored and unsung. It is, in short, a daring business.

The playwright must convince the audience that the characters are of historical stature; their historical position must be clearly focused; the danger of spreading the play's action over a period of time must be successfully encompassed; the business of making the characters appear natural without being pompous is vital.

At random, such an assortment as Edgar Allen Poe, Judas, Napoleon, Archduke Ferdinand, Mary Surratt, Anne Hathaway and King David would seem promising material for a drama. But "Plumes in the Dust," "Dear Judas," "St. Helena," "The Masque of Kings," "The Story of Mary Surratt," "Second Best Bed" and "Bathsheba" didn't turn out that way.

Metternich was a key figure in Europe from the Congress of Vienna in 1815 to the revolution of 1848. Miss Kuhn takes him up 10 years after that first Congress and brings him to 1859, purposefully avoiding the critical year of the revolution. (She skips from '31 to '59.)

Ponderous Elaboration

Therefore one sees the critical events only from lines in the play relating what has happened in scenes we do not see, which is no more than you'd get from looking him up in your old history books. But, at the same time, she has attempted dramatic sequences with a theatrical purpose.

Miss Kuhn's Metternich appears to be a man caught in the middle of family pride and the awakening of independence. To him peace is more important than freedom for countries or individuals. His second wife—a commoner hated by his mother and his friends—is some help in showing him what a great movement he might lead, but she dies just as her work is beginning. Not even a letter, employed as a voice from the grave, is enough to keep him from his family pride.

That, at least, is what Miss Kuhn appears to be driving at. But, as a philosopher once put it, her play is "a ponderous elaboration of a basic confusion."

Her Metternich is too vacillating a man to have lived through, say, the Congress of Vienna. He is cowardly on meeting a potential assassin; he is weak in not dismissing a secretary who certainly wouldn't last two weeks with this greying sentimentalist. How could such a person be the man Miss Kuhn's words insist he is?

Scenes Lack Punch

Nor have her individual scenes dramatic punch in themselves. Granted, it is a challenge to make one now care much about what happened to the freedom of Greece and Italy in the middle of the last century. But, we're afraid Miss Kuhn makes one only care even less. Her speeches are windy and pompous and her characters never more than puppets.

The production, too, is not up to the group's enviable standard. The action drags and strikes poses and the set is awkwardly conceived so that exits and entrances are invariably difficult. Nor is the lighting in the first scene all it should be.

Of the players, we found Arthur Conescu, as an old friend of the heroine whose constant presence isn't always accountable, effective, and Catherine Bettenbender, as the heroine's Italian mother, beautifully like the old miniatures of the period. She disappears after the first scene, but she is strikingly memorable.

IN BRIEF: Goodish line yesterday at the National for the seat sale opening of Maurice Chevalier's week. The one-man show will have a 9 o'clock curtain, which is swell for dinner but murder for deadlines . . . The luxuriant aroma at the Warner these days is a perfume which "just happens" to have the same name and the same release date as the picture, "Wild Harvest." The first 50 ladies at the theater each day get a free bottle and our wife says it's fine stuff . . . Today begins the three-day run for "Henry V" at the Apex . . . There'll be Halloween parties for the youngsters Saturday at Sidney Lust's Bethesda, Cameo, Milo, Marlboro and Cheverly theaters, as well as one Friday afternoon at the Kaywood, sponsored by the Kaywood Merchants Association . . . The Theater Guild's latest, "This Time Tomorrow," by Norway's Jan de Hartog, is at Ford's, Baltimore, this week, with Sam Jaffe, John Archer and Ruth Ford heading the cast; the drama opens in New York next week.

ELEANOR POWELL, always a strong Washington favorite, arrives tomorrow for a two-week stay at Club Cairo. The best thing about watching this film dancer perform is that she's never forgotten her stage beginnings. She puts on a real show with those taps of hers, not just a wan "personal appearance" howdjado.

"NINOTCHKA" returns to the Columbia Thursday, according to a wire from Loew's, which adds, "The iron curtain will be raised." This Greta Garbo-Melvyn Douglass comedy (and how we love that wonderful Garbo!) will be screened today for the reviewers and we'll give you a report.

TOMORROW: Dore Schary, producer, among other things, of Keith's fine "Crossfire," and RKO Chieftain, is in town. He'll be the subject of Richard L. Coe's column.

——AND A REAL SENATORIAL FAMILY—Nina Lunn, a familiar figure at Washington parties last season, has herself a small role with William Powell in Universal's forthcoming film, "The Senator Was Indiscreet." Not only that, she's keeping tabs on Powell's portrayal to see that it contains nothing indiscreet. As the granddaughter of Maine's Senator Wallace H. White, jr., her Capital knowledge has come in handy to the comedy producers

Bills Drafted By Legislators Of 2 Counties

Summoned to a special session of the Maryland General Assembly beginning November 5, Montgomery and Prince Georges County legislators met separateley yesterday to draw up their own plans.

By last night, the all-Republican legislative delegation of Montgomery County was readying eight bills it expects to present for consideration at the special meeting.

The Prince Georges County delegation was reported prepared to attempt to introduce three other bills for its county constitution.

Disclosed by Lofstrand

State Representative Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., of Silver Spring, Md., chairman of the Montgomery County delegation, disclosed the proposed bills already agreed upon by his group. They include:

1. A bill empowering the Montgomery County government to purchase and operate debt-ridden Suburban Hospital, in Bethesda, or seek allocation of State grants to the hospital, up to $50,000.

2. A bill to raise taxes in the Laytonsville area to finance proposed streetlighting improvements.

3. Three bills permitting establishment of a board of Takoma Park, Md., citizens to operate and handle finances of the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department. The measures would place paid members of the fire department on the town payroll.

4. A bill to authorize payment by the county to county banks in the amount of 5 cents for each tax bill paid through that bank.

5. A measure to increase the salaries of county deputy sheriffs.

6. A bill to increase the county bonding authorization to the Maryland National Capital Parks and Planning Commission from the present $1,200,000 to $2,000,000. Final authority for the acquisition of park lands would be held by the Republican-controlled County Board of Commissioners.

In Prince Georges County, Delegate Perry O. Wilkinson of Hyattsville, delegation chairman, said last night that the county legislators had prepared bills to:

1. Give the Maryland National Capital Parks and Planning Commission authority to issue bonds to increase its borrowing capacity for Prince Georges County improvements from the present $800,000 to $1,250,000.

2. Give the Mayor and Council of Riverdale authority to borrow funds not to exceed $25,000 for payment of the town's share of storm sewer construction cost.

3. Give the Mayor and Council of Riverdale authority to increase the town's tax rate from 35 cents to not more than 55 cents per $100 assessed valuation to pay for the sewer costs.

Gov. William Preston Lane announced the special session call on Sunday night to provide extra revenues needed by the City of Baltimore.

Laughs Punctuate Woman's Party Legal Battle

A general outburst of laughter at the verbal exchange of opposing counsel highlighted the beginning of the second week of the court battle between factions of the National Woman's Party.

Miss Anita Pollitzer, former chairman of the executive council of the party, took the stand in the District Court of Associate Justice James Proctor yesterday, and described how her group walked out of an executive council meeting in September, 1946, in protest to actions of the so-called "Mayflower faction."

Opposing Miss Pollitzer is the group led by Mrs. John Whitehurst, who was elected chairman of the council at the January convention, allegedly before the expiration date of officers of the Pollitzer faction.

Anne Arundel Man Convicted

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 27 (AP).—Charles Boulware was convicted in Anne Arundel County Court today of assault with intent to kill Percy Willey near Ferndale last June 1.

Judge William J. McWilliams deferred sentence.

Tyler C. Crockren was sentenced to three years and Joseph Miles to one year on conviction of stealing tools and auto parts from Joseph Decoursey last May. George R. Stocks was acquitted.

Ennals E. Clayton, prisoner at the house of correction, was sentenced to five years for assault and intent to rob Ethel Ritchie last July 7, and two years for escape from the institution.

44 Per Cent of D. C. Veterans Applied For GI Schooling

About 44 per cent of the District's World War II veterans applied for some form of education or training this year under the GI Bill and other laws administered by the Veterans Administration.

This compaser with a national average of 49 per cent, according to VA figures, which represents an increase of 50 per cent over the figures for a year ago.

An estimated 35,000 District veterans applied for schools and colleges under the GI Bill, with some 4800 in job training. Disabled District veterans applying for schools and training under Public Law 16 number about 2800. The VA's records show an estimated 97,000 veterans of the recent war living in the District.

Kids Offered Gifts For BestHalloween Window Scrawling

Logan, W. Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—The Halloween cry, "Tricks or treats," will hold no terror for Logan merchants this year. In fact, the old prannster's threat has been turned around to "treats for tricks."

Instead of waiting helplessly for the usual Halloween night window soapings, the merchants will encourage it—and even offer prizes for the best pictures soaped on their windows.

C. B. Kelly, chairman of the Logan Kiwanis Halloween party, said that every merchant had agreed to award a prize to the mischievous urchin who displays the best soap artistry on his store window.

This revolutionary treatment of Halooween is part of the city's celebration of "ghosts' and goblins' night," which will include a parade and prizes for original costumes and floats.

Virginia Police Probe Booby-Trap Blast

St. Charles, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—Virginia State troopers, headed by J. E. Fugate, were assigned today to investigate fully the booby-trap blasting Sunday night of a truck belonging to Hershell Kelly near the man's home at Penn Lee.

When the blast occurred, Kelly, operator of the Kelly Coal Mines at St. Charles, was asleep in his home.

Officers estimated that half a case of dynamite had been stacked across the top of the truck's motor. In the blast, the motor was crumbled, and the truck's cab was thrown a hundred feet down the highway.

Officers erpressed belief that the charge exploded prematurely.

E. L. McAleer To Head D. C. Loan League

By S. Oliver Goodman

Edward L. McAleer, veteran of 32 years in home financing, will be the next president of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League. His formal election is scheduled tonight at the Mayflower.

McAleer

McAleer, who will succeed Rudolph W. Santelmann, has spent his entire business career with Equitable Co-operative Building Association. Born in Washington, he graduated from old Business High School (now Roosevelt) and Georgetown University law school. He started with Equitable 32 years ago as a stenographer and became secretary, his present position, in 1935.

He also is secretary and treasurer of Washington Sanitary Housing Corp., on the advisory board of the Columbia branch of American Security & Trust Co., and is a director of American Fire Insurance Co.

Other officers of the loan league will be: Vice president, Fred Smith of Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association; secretary, F. Wilson Camp of District Building & Loan Association, and treasurer, Robert E. Buckley of National Permanent Building Association.

Six will be elected to the league's executive committee at a business meeting, starting at 5:30 p. m., preceding the reception and dinner. More than 150 persons are expected to attend. The league includes 27 institutions in Washington and nearby area.

DRUG STORES: Of 7334 items sold in drug stores, a decrease in prices is shown on 697 while 4377 remained unchanged and 2260 showed some increase in 1947 compared with 1939. The weighted price index of drug stores showed an increase of 3.12 per cent over the same period, according to James E. Allen, manager of Washington wholesale drug firm of Henry B. Gilpin Co. The survey was received from the National Wholesale Druggists Association, Allen reported.

NEW COMFORTS: It won't be long before there will be a small newsreel theater, a game and reading room, a children's nursery, a buffet-lounge styled like a modern cafe—all in one railroad car. The Pennsylvania Railroad announced yesterday it would place three so-called "recreation" cars into service on the Jeffersonian, reserved seat coach train between New York and St. Louis, early in 1948. The cars, constructed of welded high tensile steel, are being built for the PRR by the American Car & Foundry Co.

CELEBRATION: Employes of Chandler's Shoe Store, 1208 F st. nw., participated in recent celebration of twenty-fifth anniversary of the parent organization, Edison Brothers Stores, Inc. More than 3000 employes in Washington and 169 other cities contributed to gifts for the five Edison brothers. Corporation is world's largest retailer of women's shoes. It operates 185 stores.

ODD LOTS: J. D. Marsh and Associates held open house yesterday at their new quarters in the Ring Building . . . North American Co., in application filed with SEC to distribute subsidiary holdings, reported it owns 2,073,113 shares of Potomac Electric Power Co. common . . . Steel production this week will be at 97 per cent of capacity, just under the postwar high of 97.1 last week, American Iron and Steel Institute estimates . . . Sunray Oil Corp. plans increase in funded debt and issuance of convertible second preferred stock in connection with proposed merger of Pacific Western Oil Corp. and Mission Corp. into Sunray . . . Soya Corp. of America signed contract with Commodity Credit Corp. to deliver 8,600,000 pounds of edible soya bean flour for food relief in Europe.

MELONS: Extra dividends helped cheer stockholders of two large corporations. Sears Roebuck & Co. voted an extra of 75 cents a share in addition to regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on common. National Biscuit Co. declared an extra of 40 cents and a quarterly dividend of 40 cents on common.

EARNINGS: Phillips Petroleum Co. reported net income of $25,706,187 for the first nine months of 1947, equal to $5.20 a common share, compared with $14,763,153 or $3 a share in like 1946 period. Other earnings statements yesterday included:

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 27 (AP)—Cotton futures closed 70 cents to $1.50 a bale higher today. A statement by Senator Taft that the entire situation at the special session of Congress would be taken up late buying in the belief that this action will expedite cotton exports to Europe.

It was reported that the Army is nearing another 100,000 bales of cotton for Japan, although it was said that the CCC has turned down the request.

Higher crop ideas were voiced by traders, with some quarters looking for a 300,000 to 500,000 bale increase in the November Government forecast compared with the October official estimate.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. (AP).—Grains wound up the session with little change on the Board of Trade today. Prices slipped several cents during the early trading but a recovery movement then set in and brought all cereals back to around Saturday's closing levels.

Selling at the start was based on continued uncertainty regarding the Government's anti-inflation program, plus news that widespread moisture was received in the Southwest over the weekend. The upturn followed drying up of the urgent liquidation of recent sessions.

Wheat closed ½ lower to ½ higher, December, 2.97½@2.97⅝. Corn was ¾ lower to ½ higher, December, 2.20¾@2.21, and oats were ¼ lower to ¼ higher, December, 1.13⅞@1.14. Soybeans dropped 5 to 7 cents, November, 3.32.

Rains were received in many points in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas over the weekend, although the weather was mostly clear today. Moisture in the Midwest was expected to delay corn harvesting for a few days.

Attracting attention was a statement by Dr. D. A. Fitzgerald of the International Emergency Food Council that export availabilities of cereals appear to be below 29 million long tons while total world needs approximate 50 million long tons. From Australia came word that country may have its largest wheat crop in history this year.

Page County to Poll Public on Proposed Tax

Luray, Va., Oct. 27.—A poll of Page County residents will be taken shortly after election day to determine whether they favor a 20-cent tax to build a new hospital. Such a levy would raise approximately $10,000 a year.

The decision to poll citizens was made at a meeting of the Page Memorial Hospital Board. If the public reaction to the levy is favorable, the hospital board will request the Board of Supervisors to add the tax to the general fund levy.

Rent Question Request Turned Down by Tuck

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—Governor Tuck today turned down a request that he intercede to recommend changes in the Danville area rent control board and to postpone public hearings scheduled there on the advisability of a general rent increase.

The request came from Louis Conn, director of the Pittsylvania County joint board, Textile Workers Union, CIO, in a telegram late last week.

Pet Kitten Given Away, Terrier Brings It Home

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 27 (AP).—Ratter, a terrier who keeps a pet kitten, had his cat back for keeps today, after frustrating a family attempt to give it to the little girl down he street.

Ratter was crestfallen yesterday when Donald Gossard, 9, made a present of the kitten to a girlfriend living two blocks away. Today the dog took matters into his own mouth and lugged his companion back home by the scruff of the neck, this time to stay.

Mountbatten Hurt at Polo

New Delhi, Oct. 27 (AP).—Lord Mountbatten, governor general of India, was treated today for an injury of his right arm suffered while playing polo yesterday.

Drought Cuts Milk Output, Adds Fire Risk

The driest October on record for the Washington area is seriously cutting milk production and increasing the danger of forest fires in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

The possibility of .1-inch precipitation today is not expected to change materially the situation which has brought fire warnings from foresters and caused many farmers to put their cattle on winter rations despite the President's appeal to save grain.

With exception of .02 inch of rain October 17, Washington has had no measurable precipitation since September 25, making it 2.44 inches below normal and the driest October since the start of Weather Bureau records in 1871.

Milk production has dropped 12 per cent since October 1, B. B. Derrick, executive secretary of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, estimated yesterday.

W. Virginia Fires Controlled

Six-day-old forest fires in West Virginia's east panhandle have been brought under control, the Associated Press reported last night, but a new fire was said to be spreading rapidly near Bayard in Grant County, just across the Maryland State line.

The Maryland Department of Forests and Parks has tripled the strength of its patrols, put them on 24-hour vigil and has issued orders to State Forest Guards to enlist all the men necessary in emergencies.

In Richmond, the Virginia State Game Commission has ordered all hunting in Dismal Swamp closed after 5 p. m. Wednesday until further notice because of fires in that area.

At Winchester, Va., Thomas Rosenberger, chief fire warden for Frederick County, warned against all unnecessary brush burning and recommended that if brush must be burned a strip be plowed around it before hand and sufficient help be present to extinguish any spreading blazes.

Seed Germination Hurt

Both Maryland and Virginia County agricultural agents said the drought has slower germination of small grains and has dried up wells and springs in some sections.

County Agent William H. Cockerill at Leesburg, Va., said a number of rural families near there are having to haul water. He cited declining milk production and said some farmers have put cattle on full winter rations.

County Agent Frank Cox at Manassas, said many small streams in the county were drying up "that haven't dried up in several years." Hay is short, he said, and late alfalfa is either short or hasn't come up at all.

Pastures normally suffering from frost and freezes are suffering this year from drought, said County Agent J. E. Beard at Fairfax, Va. He also warned water was "getting rather low."

County Agent O. W. Anderson at tures mean farmers are feeding Rockville, Md., said dried-up pasttheir cattle grain. Because of high grain prices, he said, many farmers are feeding their cattle less, which also is affecting milk production.

At La Plata, Md., County Agent a part of the Washington milkshed, B. D. Brown, whose section is not reported wheat germinating slowly and cattle going on winter rations.

One Out of Four U. S. Residents Owns Telephone

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The United States is the world's chatterbox, at least when it's on the telephone.

Its citizens held no less than 42 billion telephone conversations last year—far more than any other country in the world.

However, it had more phones to talk over than any other nation—nearly three fifths of all in the world and one for nearly every four persons, as compared with one for 43 over the rest of the globe. Calls averaged 301 for each citizen during the year.

These figures were given today by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., which said San Francisco had more phones on a per capita basis than any other major city, about one for each two residents.

By contrast, said the AT&T, the Soviet Union had one for every 140 people.

Weatherman Predicts Home-Made Weather

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—F. W. Reichelderfer, chief of the U. S. Weather Bureau, today declared "the day may be approaching when—heaven forbid—the Weather Bureau will become a national rain-making agency, producing rain and snow on order."

Speaking on a University of Chicago roundtable broadcast (over NBC), Reichelderfer said "the best we can do today is to produce rain or snow over limited areas under special conditions and apply the process locally to clearing up airport fogs, supplying rainfall for a farm, and the like.

Fire Destroys Christ Church At Millwood

Millwood, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—Historic Christ Episcopal Church, which reopened for services only yesterday after extensive remodeling and redecoration, was virtually destroyed by fire today.

Only the crumbling limestone walls were left after firemen from nearby Berryville and Winchester, hampered in their efforts by a scant water supply, managed finally to extinguish the flames. Damage was estimated unofficially at from $60,000 to $70,000 by members of the parish.

The blaze was discovered about 9 a. m. by Mrs. Peyton Craighill, wife of the rector, whose home at the nearby rectory was endangered for a while until a shift in the wind checked the flames.

The auxiliary fire fighting forces from Berryville and Winchester answered the alarm promptly, but had difficulty in obtaining water from a creek running through this Clarke County village from which water had to be pumped uphill for half a mile.

Flames crackled and roared through the church's interior and before the metal roof fell in eight large stained glass memorial windows became distorted and then shattered in the heat. Firemen managed, however, to salvage an iron safe containing the communion service and the church records.

Christ Church, one of the oldest in the northern Virginia area, was rebuilt in the 1860s. It had been closed for the past two months for extensive redecorating and alterations and yesterday a rededication service was conducted.

Fields Loses His Appeal in Contempt Case

Benjamin F. Fields, promoter and former convict, yesterday lost his appeal from a 90-day jail term and $250 fine for contempt of the House.

Upholding Fields' conviction, the United States Court of Appeals here settled a legal question on which the Justices of the District Court have disagreed.

The higher court held, with Justice Alexander Holtzoff, that "wilful" only means "on purpose" in contempt cases.

Without putting up a dime of his own, Fields made $4442.80 on 539 rolls of wire screen he got from the War Assets Administration. He paid out more than $1800 in commissions to two "John Does." When the House Surplus Committee last year told Fields to bring in all his records of the deal, he refused.

Justice Holtzoff told the jury that if Fields refused "on purpose" he was guilty of contempt. Fields claimed the Government had to show that he had "a wicked purpose" in order to convict him of "wilful" refusal.

Swiss Middle-Class Parties Apparent Election Winners

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Swiss telegraph agency said tonight that, judging from incomplete returns from the parliamentary election, "it appears that middle-class parties are victorious."

The Liberal and Peasant Parties are regarded as representing the center. Should their presumed gains be confirmed, this would strengthen the anti-Socialist bloc in Parliament, which heretofore has elected most of the seven members of the Federal Council, chief executive authority of the Swiss Confederation.

The agency said that in the balloting yesterday and today, which attracted more than one million voters, the Liberals gained four seats in the lower house (Nationalrat) and one in the upper house (Staenderat).

The Socialists, on the other hand, it reported, lost one seat in each house. The agency conceded two or three seats in the lower house to the Labor Party, which absorbed most Communist elements during the wartime ban against the Communist Party in this country.

Retired Md. Farmer Dies After Fall

Frederick, Md., Oct. 27 (Spl.).—Manro Yohn, 84, well-known retired farmer near Winfield, was instantly killed Saturday when he tripped and fell over a wire at the home of his son, Merhle Yohn. Dr. James T. Marsh, Carroll county medical examiner, said death was caused by a broken neck. Three sons and a brother survive. Funeral services were held this afternoon.

Rochester Hospital Care Plan to Be Discussed

Baltimore, Oct. 27 (AP).—Dr. Basil McLean, director of the Strong Memorial Hospital, Rochester, N. Y., will discuss the Rochester plan of hospital care here November 10, on the first day of the annual two-day conference of the Maryland-District of Columbia Hospital Association.

Other speakers will include Dr. Perrin H. Long, who will discuss "Atomic Energy in Medicine."

Two Health Groups Consider Survey on Medical Care Costs

A survey of how much District patients pay for hospitalization and medical care, in relation to their income, is being considered by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and the U. S. Public Health Service.

The object of such a survey would be to provide a new basis for determining fees charged by group hospitalization and medical care organizations according to Dr. William Earl Clark, chairman of the Medical Society's committee on medical care.

The committee will take up the proposed survey at a meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. If the expected committee approval is voted, the plan will go to the Society's executive board for consideration.

The U. S. Health Service, which recently reported findings of a statistical survey of the District's physicians made jointly with the Medical Society, is reported to be ready to start on the hospital cost study.

Tobacco Sales 'Padding' Under Study

Richmond, Va., Oct. 21 (AP).—Alleged "padding" of tobacco market sales figures have been discussed by L. M. Walker, jr., State commissioner of agriculture, with Charles E. Gage of the tobacco branch of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Commenting on a recent editorial in the Danville Register which complained that unofficial figures on average prices and poundage obtained from market supervisors were "padded," Walker said:

"We are hopeful that conditions along these lines soon will be improved. We have every reason to believe that official reports made to this department of agriculture are accurate, but such reports are received too late to inform tobacco growers through the press. Such reports are of a statistical nature and are not for market use."

Walker said that while it has been recognized for a long time that some reports have not been accurate," it has not been possible to get true market sales reports from all individual tobacco markets separately by State or Federal personnel."

Meanwhile Clinton P. Anderson, United States Secretary of Agriculture, advised the Danville Register that the Federal agency is working on a plan to obtain official figures on individual tobacco markets and release them for publication.

Padway Will Filed In District Court

The will of Joseph Padway, chief counsel for the American Federation of Labor at the time of his death early this month in San Francisco, was filed yesterday without petition for probate in District Court here.

According to the will, he left $5000 and their Milwaukee home and its furnishings, except for lawbooks, to his widow, Mrs. Wydia Padway. A daughter, Mrs. Ruth Weinshel, and her husband, Dr. Leo Weinshel, were left $2500 each. Dr. Weinshel also was left a diamons-studded pocket watch.

The will specified that Padway's law library of several hundred volumes be divided between two nephews, Alfred Goldberg and I. E. Goldberg. Bequests from $100 to $500 were left to several Milwaukee Jewish institutions.

Man, Charged in Wife's Death, Found Insane

Henry T. Wright, 73, of 913 Perry pl. ne., charged with first degree murder in the slaying of his wife, was found of unsound mind in a lunacy hearing yesterday before Associate Justice Edward M. Curran.

Wright was indicted September 16 for allegedly shooting to death his wife, Lulu Belle, 49 at their home June 3. Yesterday's hearing was held at the request of the Government.

Warrenton Angus Sale Averages $967

Warrenton, Oct. 27 (Spl.).—Forty-one Aberdeen-Angus cattle brought $39,647, an average of $967 per head, at the Virginia Aberdeen-Angue breeders' show and sale at the Eastern Breeder Sales Pavilion here today.

Amandale's Pride, a cow bred and sold by Mr. and Mrs. John G. Gall of Amandale Farm, Upperville, Va., brought the highest price during the sale—$4100, paid by Lee Butler of Kinloch Farm, Supply, Va.

Blackbird 16th of Highlands, a cow bred and owned by Highlands Farm, Round Hill, Va., took the junior championship female award and was sold to Reverie Knoll, Danville, Ky., for $1625.

Amandale Farm sold four cows and one bull for a total of $9025 to top the consignors in sales, with Highlands Farm selling seven head for a total of $7925 for second high.

Sale Manager Sam O'Sullivan of Shady Nook Farm, Brandy, Va., called the show and sale one of the best in the history of the Virginia Aberdeen-Angus Breeders Association.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

'Send Them to Hospitals, Not to Jail,' Says Irwin

Irwin Abell of 2505 Que st. se. comes up with one of those suggestions that makes you wonder "why didn't I think of that?" He says:

"Like everybody else who operates a vehicle regularly, I think I'd do much better at solving our traffic problems than our officials are doing.

"I won't bore you with my whole program, but here's one point I would like to suggest. Under present laws, when a driver injures somebody, he's sometimes sent to jail.

"Why not send such drivers to our hospitals, to serve out their time as orderlies who tend to the needs of the injured?

"Such a plan would put the guilty driver to some useful service.

"It would also serve to impress him with the gravity of his offense by throwing him into contact with the suffering that results from such accidents."

HELP WANTED

Mrs. Frank Smith of 9405 Saybrook ave., Silver Spring, Md., writes:

"The Silver Spring Health Center, sponsored by lay people, was built and equipped to hold Health Department clinics in this area.

"The demands on our free loan closet have been heavy, and the need is very great. Currently we're trying to get a large wheel chair and a hospital bed, and we can't afford to buy them.

"Do you suppose any of our District Liners would be in a position to donate such items for a worthy cause? The Health Center is located on Old Bladensburg rd., between Franklin ave. and Piney Branch rd."

TO MEET MEAT BAN

Synthetic substitutes are rife
In every phase of modern life.
But we need now someone to make
An edible though plastic steak.
Jay Aitch.

If we must switch to plastic steak
The news, in stride, I'll calmly take.
But just before I start to chew
I'd like to try it out on you.
W. E. G.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Beautiful silver Persian cat." (Mr. Watts, Temple 8466).

"Male puppy, 5 weeks old. Pets aren't allowed in Greenbelt." (Greenbelt 6347).

REPORT

Some time ago we carried an item about Mrs. Charles H. Douglas of 4836 South 29th st., Arlington, Va., who offered to give away a collection of circus mementos.

I asked Mrs. Douglas to let us know how she made out, and here's her report:

"There was such a terrific response that I was really quite confused. However, I finally gave the photographs, route listings, etc., to Dr. Ernest E. Blanche.

"He is going to use them as background in writing a book about life behind the scenes in show business. When he's finished the material will be sent to the circus museum at Sarasota, Fla."

LOOK ALIKES

"Did you notice," writes M. McBride of Colorado ave. nw., "that Wayne Winstead, the cab driver pictured in your column on October 22, looks like Dane Clark of the cinema?"

The resemblance to a movie actor is only skin deep. Wayne has never been investigated by a congressional committee.

ADD NAMES

Harry Baker of 803 8th st. nw. adds a few names to our collection—this time from among employes at the Veterans Administration:

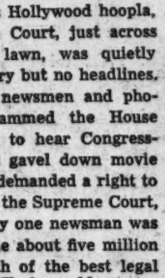
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Ike's Pals Look Forward to '48

Some of General Eisenhower's comrades-in-arms are licking their lips over the prospect of his being President of the United States.



Chip Robert

At a Washington dinner party the other night, guests crowded round vivacious Anthony Drexel Biddle of the Philadelphia banking family whom F. D. R. elevated from court tennis champion to United States Ambassador to Poland.

As guests gathered around Tony, admiring his medals, Gen. Edwin Sibert, intelligence officer, remarked:

"Tony, you'd better not go back to Europe. Stay in this country and get aboard the Eisenhower bandwagon. It's going places."

Tony looked wistful, but said nothing. Perhaps he remembered the $90,000 he contributed to the Roosevelt bandwagon before he got his ambassadorship, and also how Chip Robert, then treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, used to phone him in Europe, brazenly hinting that the Democratic coffers were very low and the State Department was avidly eyeing his job.

Whether he remembered or not, the Democratic Mr. Biddle did not move to join the Eisenhower bandwagon.

Hollywood vs. Cement

While the House Un-American Activities Committee made headlines with its Hollywood hoopla, the Supreme Court, just across the Capitol lawn, was quietly making history but no headlines.

Scores of newsmen and photographers jammed the House caucus room to hear Congressman Thomas gavel down movie writers who demanded a right to be heard. In the Supreme Court, however, only one newsman was present, while about five million dollars' worth of the best legal brains New York could muster listened to a dreary but vital argument going to the roots of American free enterprise.

The case was the Federal Trade Commission's opposition to the cement industry's basing-point formula, by which the cement manufacturer in Keokuk, Iowa, sells cement to the builder in San Francisco for exactly the same price as he sells to the builder in Keokuk. In other words, it is charged that all the Nation's cement manufacturers conspire to fix prices, so that no matter what the cost of freight shipment, the price of cement throughout the entire United States is just the same.

Actually far more than cement was at stake in the Supreme Court hearing. For the steel industry follows the same basing-point monopolistic system, so that upon the Supreme Court's ruling partly depends the future of American competition.

That is why so many of the Nation's top lawyers overflowed the court to such an extent that they had to sit in the spectators' seats. "Will Bill" Donovan, grizzled World War I hero, represented the Cement Institute. At his side sat fiery, silver-thatched Nathan Miller, former Governor of New York, backed by 75 other high-salaried barristers, including U. S. Steel's chief counsel, Roy Blough.

Facing this overpowering array were two Government lawyers, Charles Weston of the Justice Department and Walter Wooden of the Federal Trade Commission, whose salaries are less than $10,000 a year each.

Weston opened the case for the Government by citing the sealed bids submitted to supply cement for the United States Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kans. Seven independent producers submitted bids—each identical down to a ten-thousandth fraction of a cent—regardless of how far they had to ship the cement. On another occasion, the Illinois Highway Commission requested bids for delivery to 102 different destinations. Nine producers bid an identical price.

"Here are some 75 different producers," squeaked Weston, "selling at thousands of places, and all using the same system in substantially all sales with minor variations."

Answering the charges, war hero "Wild Bill" Donovan, once GOP chief of the Antitrust Division, denied that the FTC ever found any evidence of an industry-wide agreement not to undersell each other. Supreme Court Justices, however, were skeptical.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

3 More Writers Cited in Contempt

Reds have infiltrated Hollywood were:

1. Roy M. Brewer, international representative of the Hollywood Alliance of Theatrical State Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators, told the committee "the Communist plan to control the motion picture industry as a whole . . . came dangerously close to success." Brewer said that plan was developed with the direct advice of a Soviet official, Michael E. Aisenstein, representative of Amtorg Corp., Soviet trading corporation.

2. Paul V. McNutt, attorney for the Motion Picture Association of America and the Association of Motion Picture Producers, demanded that Thomas prove what McNutt termed "vicious charges" that the motion picture industry had attempted to stifle the committee inquiry.

3. Thomas promised a full reply, and asked McNutt if he knew a Mr. Rosner who lived at the Shoreham Hotel. McNutt said Rosner had no connection with him or with the clients he represents. The Rosner reference was not amplified.

4. A galaxy of Hollywood luminaries led by Actor Humphrey Bogart and his wife, Lauren Bacall, filed a petition for re-dress of grievances "with the Clerk of the House, stating that the House Committee on Un-American Activities is persistently violating "the civil liberties of American citizens."

The flickerland personalities, members of the newly formed "Committee for the Preservation of the First Amendment to the Constitution," were accompanied to the clerk's office by Representative Chet Holifield (D., Calif.).

Mob Wounds Miss. Negro in Lynch Attempt

Aberdeen, Miss., Oct. 28 (AP).—Police Chief John Barret reported today "a mob of about 20 white men" tried to lynch a Negro Sunday night, but succeeded only in wounding him.

Barret said the Negro apparently is the "wrong man," and had nothing to do with an attempted attack upon a white woman.

"The mob took him out," Barret said, "and left him wounded. They thought they had killed him, I believe. He's in a hospital here. I think he will recover."

Following the rape attempt Saturday night, bloodhounds led a posse to the home of John Lloyd, 43, a farm worker. He was released later because of "lack of evidence."

Lloyd returned home and on Sunday night was seized there, beaten and shot twice—once in the spine and once in the arm.

"The Negro can't identify any of the mob who shot him. Everything here is quiet. It has all blown over. There was a lot of hard feeling Sunday. But everything is under control," Barret said.

Woodward, Okla., Fire Destroys 4 Buildings

Woodward, Okla., Oct. 28 (AP).—Fire accompanied by two heavy explosions destroyed four business buildings in this northwestern Oklahoma town of 5500 today and threatened the entire business district before it finally was brought under control.

Insurance men estimated the damage at $250,000 to $300,000. So far as could be learned, no lives were lost, but several persons were injured when one explosion hurled debris into Woodward's main street.

All the buildings destroyed today had been repaired after suffering damage in the April 9 tornado which swept into Woodward from the Texas panhandle, killing 156 and injuring more than 1000 in the two States. Of that total, 106 deaths occurred in the Woodward area and much of the town was wiped out.

U. S. Security Advisory Board Eases 'Gag Rule' Regulations

denounced the proposed regulations as a "gag rule."

They pointed out that the regulations could be used to cover up Administration errors and inefficiency.

Criticism has been leveled at the Administration because the new rules on classified information henceforth will lapply to all Federal departments and agencies, in addition to the recognized "sensitive" departments including State, Army, Navy, Air Force and the Atomic Energy Commission.

It has been pointed out, for example, that the Veterans Administration, which is not apt to be handling top secret, secret or confidential information insofar as national security is concerned, already has applied the Security Advisory Board's original set of rules to its employes.

Michael J. McDermott, special assistant to Secretary of State Marshall, in making public the revised definitions, called the move "a loosening up."

He declined to make public the rest of the Security Board's recommendations, however.

One of the most important of the latter is understood to be that a security officer hereafter shall be installed in each department and agency, charged with protecting classified information.

President Truman directed this standardization in an executive order of last March, applying the "loyalty" test to all Federal employes.

The three-man Security Advisory Board, headed by Hamilton Robinson of the State Department made original recommendations to a coordinating committee representing State, Army, Navy and Air Force. They were approved. Yesterday the board reconsidered and made the current eliminations.

Eventually, as revised, the classifications will be proclaimed by the President in an executive order.

The board said that wherever "security protetcion . . . for the national welfare" demands it, official information will be given one of these four classifications:

"Top secret. Information, the security aspect of which is paramount, and the unauthorized disclosure of which would cause exceptionally grave danger to the Nation." (Before the amendment, it had read . . . "Unauthorized disclosure of which would cause exceptionally grave danger to the prestige of the Nation or any Government activity thereof)."

"Secret. Information, the unauthorized disclosure of which would endanger national security, or would cause serious injury to the interest of prestige of the Nation, or would be of great advantage to a foreign nation."

Va. Plane Crash Victims to Get Grave Marker

A granite monument will be placed Saturday over the mass graves of eight persons buried at Union Cemetery, Leesburg, Va., who lost their lives in the crash of a Capital Airliner in the Blue Ridge Mountains June 13. The stone is being erected by the airline, but no ceremony is planned.

The monumetn is 4 feet high, 4½ fet wide and 4 inches thick. On the polished face are inscribed the names of the eight persons whose bodies remained unidentified.

Fifty persons were killed—including an 18-month-old girl—when the giant DC-4 airliner plummeted into the fog-shrouded Blue Ridge, about 10 miles from Purcellville, Va.

Cholera Kills 408 More; U. S. Vaccine Arrives

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 28 (U.P.).—The cholera plague killed 408 more persons during the past 24 hours and 880 new cases were reported, the health ministry announced tonight.

The ministry said 1,200,000 units of cholera vaccine arrived today from the United States through the United Nations International Health Institute and that two million more units were expected momentarily from Shanghai.

New Building Planned for Legislature

Baltimore, Oct. 28 (AP).—Plans for a two-million-dollar State office building at Annapolis were proposed today by the Maryland Legislative Council for consideration of the State Legislature.

The new four-story Colonial structure would house the overflow of legislative business from the historic Maryland State House, built in 1772 and now deemed "inadequate" as a capitol building in a modern State.

Deliberative sessions of the Legislature may eventually be moved from the State House to Senate and House chambers in the new building across the street on State Circle in Annapolis.

The council resolved to ask Attorney General Hall Hammond to include a two-million-dollar building fund as an amendment to the State Bond Act of 1947 and recommended that a special session of the General Assembly November 5 also name a building committee.

State Engineer John B. Funk told the council that estimated cost of the structure would be $1,222,000, and that the cost with legislative chambers added would be $450,000 more, or a total of $1,672,000.

The building, without House and Senate chambers, would provide for committee hearings and offices for the legislators. Funk outlined "a rough idea" for a structure including:

A main hearing room, seating 300, for joint committee hearings; four smaller committee hearing rooms; separate rooms for county delegations, ranging from one seating 50 spectators for Baltimore City's delegation to delegation rooms of the smaller counties for two delegates each.

The Governor's lay committee would provide historical advice on possible methods of restoring the State House to its original design, possibly by removing a wing which has been added to the eighteenth century structure.

Maryland's first State House, built in 1697, was destroyed by fire; the second, built in 1704, was torn down to make room for the present structure, in which the Annapolis Convention of 1786 assembled as a forerunner of the convention that framed the American Constitution.

Grange Told Of Lee's Aid To Agriculture

Richmond, Va., Oct. 28 (AP).—Robert E. Lee — who coveted "above all things" a farm but never owned one—nevertheless devised one of the "earliest and most complete" programs of agricultural education, Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, said here tonight.

The commander in chief of the Confederate Army at the end of the War Between the States was "quietly exploring possibilities" of purchasing a farm when he was offered the presidency of Washington College and with it "an opportunity which he felt he could not decline."

So, instead of retiring to the country, Lee set to work building up the college, which now as Washington and Lee University, bears his name, Dr. Gaines told 300 delegates to the Virginia State Grange at their banquet session tonight.

"Interpreting with largest educational statesmanship the needs of the new South, Lee brought to the Lexington college new programs in engineering, in journalism, in applied science," the W&L president said. He devised, though he was not to execute, courses in business administration and agriculture.

"The proposed course in agriculture, recommended in January, 1869, embraced 13 divisions, all that was then known and most that is now known in the field of agriculture."

Dr. Gaines' address was one of two highlights of the banquet. Later State Commissioner of Agriculture L. M. Walker, jr., was to present the "sweetheart of the Virginia State Grange."

Earlier in the day the 300 delegates had heard Paul D. Sanders, grange master, declare that—in event a retail sales tax should be adopted in Virginia—fram production items should be exempt.

If these production items—such as seeds, feeds, fertilizers, baby chicks—were included among taxable items under a retail sales levy it would mean double taxation for the farmer and "would destroy farming as a profitable pursuit," Sanders asserted.

Indictment Says Two Men Cashed Same Check Twice

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—Two camp parole men stood indicted by the Anne Arundel County grand jury today after police charged they cashed the same check twice.

Nelson Eades and Rudolph Pinkney were accused of for stealing a $99 check from a neighborhood grocer, and County Police Sergt. Brooke Meade said it came about this way:

Mrs. Emma Eades, Nelson's mother, indorsed a County Welfare Board check last May 15. Eades and Pinkney took it to I. Finklestein's grocery down the street from their home. Finklestein cashed it. Eades and Pinkney left the store with the money said was lifted from the top of —and the check, which Meade Finklestein's cash register.

They came to Annapolis and cashed the same check in another store. They tried the same stunt with another check, police charged, but aroused suspicion.

Danish Reds Trail In Parliament Vote

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 28 (U.P.).—Returns from 33 of 117 districts in today's general election showed that the Communists had lost 50 per cent of the votes they got in 1945. The election is for members of the lower House of Parliament.

Greenbelt Unit Approves Plan To Buy Town

A proposal to negotiate for mutual purchase of the Town of Greenbelt by its present occupants had been approved by the local Mutual Housing Association, composed of 900 families residing in the town.

Officials of the association said yesterday the group, in anticipation of Federal sale of the town in the near future, has agreed to engage a private home development firm to conduct the negotiations in an effort to assure sale of the homes to the present tenants.

At the same time, the membership approved a resolution calling for formation of a local mutual home ownership corporation to supplant the present association. The board of directors was authorized to take immediate steps to obtain a charter for the new corporation.

Present association members would be accepted as charter members of the mutual housing group on payment of a $10 membership fee within 15 days after its formation. As charter members they would be entitled to receive "such preferences and privileges as may be prescribed in the by-laws."

Action was taken after Sherrod East, president of the association, said the immediate steps on the part of residents are necessary to protect their interest in the sale of Greenbelt homes. He said mutual ownership of the town would result in "the greatest financial savings" to its occupants.

100 Families Flee As Flood Hits Galax Again

Galax, Va., Oct. 28 (AP).—A flash flood early today forced about 100 families to evacuate their homes in this valley community which has not quite recovered from a more serious flood October 17.

There were no casualties reported.

Chestnut Creek overflower after what officials described as a "very heavy rain" between 3 and 4 a. m. today making the city's water supply inoperative and closing four furniture plants employing about 1000 persons. The factories were closed because of the unavailability of water and not because of any damage to the plants.

Damage was described as "considerable," but no estimates were available immediately. Personal losses on October 17 were estimated at $250,000.

Middie Discharged In Grid Ticket Deal

Irregularities In Handling Penn Ducats Charged

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—A Naval Academy spokesman announced tonight Midshipman Frederick W. Lauer, jr., Wilmette, Ill., had been discharged chiefly for "irregularities in the handling of tickets for the Penn-Navy game of last weekend."

The spokesman said:

"Careful investigation by the Naval Academy authorities indicated that Mr. Lauer was the only midshipman who stood to profit by the transaction and who was involved in major irregularities."

Civilian Apprehended

Lauer, a first classman or senior, was confined at the academy after a man who identified himself as Harry Rubin of Philadelphia, was apprehended October 15 at the main gate carrying 400 tickets to the Penn-game, the spokesman said.

He added:

"Mr. Lauer obtained the tickets from individual midshipmen of the junior classes who turned over their applications to him in good faith.

"The midshipmen were entitled to purchase a maximum of four tickets for the Penn-Navy game if they so applied."

The spokesmen said Rubin "of his own free will" stated another Philadelphian asked me to come down to the United States Naval Academy to pick up a bundle from Midshipman Lauer.'"

Lauer entered the Naval Academy August 4 1944 and had served previously in the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps at Notre Dame.

No rule specifically prohibits a midshipman from reselling tickets. Application forms state, however, "a member will be held accountable for tickets falling into the hands of speculators."

Midshipmen are members of the Navy Athletic Association, which supervises the sale of tickets to sports events.

In South

Nurse Group Is Removing Racial Bars

New York, Oct. 28.—Southern branches of the American Nurses Association are taking steps to remove discriminatory barriers against Negro nurses, Miss Alma Vessells, executive secretary of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses here said today.

Miss Vessells estimated that more than 4500 Negro nurses in the South, alone have been denied professional status because they could not obtain membership in the American Nurses Association. Memberships are controlled by constituent State and district units. Prior to 1942, she said, exclusion of Negroes was a uniform practice throughout the South.

The Kentucky State Association of Registered Nurses, one of 18 ANA constituents which formerly excluded Negroes, has notified Miss Vessells that its convention has voted a reversal of policy in this respect. The Florida association took the lead in 1942 and was followed more recently by those of Delaware, Maryland and Tennessee. In Missouri, District 2, embracing St. Louis, has paced the State association with similar action.

Last month, she said, at the Chicago convention of the House of Delegates, the Tennessee association was represented by a Negro.

2 More Facing Gaming Quiz In Arlington

Only two more witnesses face interrogation by an Arlington grand jury investigating a possible tieup between county police and local gambling interests.

Police Chief Harry Woodyard and Detective Chief Capt. Hugh Jones will be called before the jury today at 10 a. m. when it reconvenes in the Arlington County courthouse.

In its four days of hearings, the grand jury has thus far heard the total of 35 witnesses. The grand jury investigation was said to be the longest within memory of county officials.

Heard yesterday were five witnesses: Police Identification Officer Walter Bell, F. Mitchells Lewis, a plumber's assistant of 1762 N. Troy st.; Detective Sergt. Dudley Rector, Detective Louis Elliott and Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence Douglas. Douglas was before the grand jury nearly three hours.

Evidence which touched off the grand jury probe taken from the home of convicted gambler Russell Scheele, 2716 N. 19th st., was presented to the grand jury yesterday. Included were cash and checks totaling more than $2500 and a quantity of numbers and horse race slips.

Meantime, the Arlington County Ministerial Association in a meeting at the Arlington YMCA, planned to set up its own committee to determine whether gamblers and other "criminal elements" are "spilling over into the county" from Washington.

The group asked its president, the Rev. Joseph Johnston, pastor of the Arlington Methodist Church, to appoint the sutdy committee.

The grand jury, which is expected to wind up its witness hearings today, may return with any one of three decisions: (1) it may bring in an indictment or indictments, (2) it may bring in a complaint asking for ouster proceedings against county officials alleged to be involved, or (3) it may come back with a report of having found no evidence on which to make any charge.

Russian Midget Actors Weep for 'Giant' Director

Miami, Fla., Oct. 28 (U.P.).—The little people of the once-famed Royal Russian Midget Co. laid to rest their "giant" friend today.

Tears dribbled down the doll-like cheeks as the quartet of actors, only ones left of the original group of six, stood on tiptoe for a final farewell to the 4-foot 10-inch figure that lay in the casket. He fell dead yesterday.

In the 38 years they had lived and worked under his guidance, the midgets always had called the Muscovite "teacher." And when he brought them to this country and to theatrical fame, he changed his unpronounceable Russian name to Joseph Peter Teacher, at their insistence.

In 1941, the six little Russians retired from the stage to live in a small white house in Miami. Then one of their number married a normal-sized man. Last year another trouper died.

U. S. Employe Held in $2000 In Abortion

A National Bureau of Standards physicist yesterday was charged with abortion and released on $2000 bond for hearing November 12.

Called to police headquarters for questioning, Harold De Freest Miller, 46, of 1604 Q st. nw., the physicist, was held for performing an abortion on Agnes Marie Blume, 26, of 821 Emerson st. nw.

Miss Blume, a receptionist at the Remington Rand, Inc., was admitted to Emergency Hospital at 3 a. m. last Thursday and died at 8 a. m. Sunday. Police were not notified of the case until her death and said she had told hospital attendants the abortion was performed in Baltimore.

Authorities charge the illegal operation was performed at Miller's apartment and that a private physician was called in Thursday when her position became worse. Her death was due to the illegal operation, Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy announced following an autopsy. Date for a coroner's inquest has not yet been set.

Miller was granted the continuance yesterday by U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage in order to obtain legal counsel. He is divorced and has no children, police said.

Episcopalian, Presbyterian Union Debated

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Debate flared yesterday on a proposal to unite the Episcopalians and Presbyterians.

The occasion was the first open meeting of the Episcopal Commission on Approaches to Unity, held at the Washington Cathedral's college of preachers. It was marked by lengthy discussion on Episcopal recognition of the equality of Presbyterian ordination vows, the chief "stumbling block" in the proposed plan.

Episcopal-Presbyterian union is timely, the Rev. Albert J. M. Wilson, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Greenwich, Conn., said. He contended there would be general agreement between the two church bodies but reminded that "it is in the doctrine of the ministry that we shall find debate, discussion and difference."

The Rev. Francis John Moore, rector of the Church of the Advent, Cincinnati, Ohio, said Episcopalians should be prepared to recognize the equality of Presbyterian ordination vows or "the Commission should pack up and go home."

Opposing union with the Presbyterians but favoring closer Episcopal cooperation with Eastern Orthodox churches were the Rev. Francis J. Bloodgood, canon of the Episcopal Cathedral at Milwaukee, Wis., and other repreesntatives of the American Church Union, a "high" Episcopal church organization. John Lord O'Brian of Washington, former United States Solicitor General, presided at the sessions, slated to continue today and tomorrow. The Right Rev. Robert E. L. Strider, Bishop of West Virginia, is Unity Commission chairman, and Dr. A. C. Zabriskie, dean Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, secretary.

Need of Church Services to Aid Students Cited

Dr. Lawrence D. Folkemer, head of George Washington University's religious department, last night challenged churches to meet their opportunities and responsibilities in ministering to students.

The church should be just as alive and alert in its student ministry as it was in ministering to service personnel, said Dr. Folkemer, reminding that campuses are now filled with former servicemen.

Dr. Folkemer addressed the fall dinner of the Christian (Disciples of Christ) Church Council of Metropolitan Washington at Columbia Heights Christian Church, 1435 Park Rd. nw. He said there are now eight clubs ministering to the spiritual needs of Catholic, Jewish andProtestant students at George Washington University. Dr. William J. Lineback, executive director of the Christian Church Council, presided at the dinner.

Senate Group Set to Resume Hughes Probe

By the United Press

Round two of the Senate investigation into movie-maker Howard Hughes' war plane contracts is scheduled tentatively to open here Monday with Hughes and his free-spending press agent, John Meyer, high up on the list of witnesses.

Sources close to the Senate war investigating committee said members of the group and their staff have been holding daily secret sessions and have questioned at least two new witnesses in preparation for the new hearings.

The committee's original hearing was terminated suddenly on August 11, after two weeks of wrangling testimony on Hughes' 40-million-dollar wartime aircraft contracts.

It was reported that when the new hearing begins, the committee will investigate charges that at least one high-ranking army procurement officer profited handsomely from his job.

Undersea Oil Deal Critics Map Plan to Outlaw Wells

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

New moves were hinted yesterday to outlaw the Krug-Clark deal for private wells to draw oil from the California sea bottoms.

Critics of the deal said they might ask for an injunction against Interior Secretary Julius A. (Cap) Krug and Attorney General Tom C. Clark.

Gave Up U. S. Claim

Last July Krug and Clark made a deal with California's attorney general, Fred M. Howser, to let the private wells—which had been licensed by the State—go on drawing oil from the Government's pools. They also agreed to new wells being drilled, and gave up the Government's claim to three bays. These deals were filed as stipulations with the Supreme Court.

Critics told the court Krug and Clark had no power to give away the Government's rights and asked the court to hold the deals void. The court did not do so, but on Monday it struck both stipulations out of its record.

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman at once said the stipulations were in full force and effect just the same.

Agrees With Perlman

The Attorney General told The Washington Post last night that he fully concurred with Perlman on this point.

Clark said he regarded the stipulations as an interim arrangement to keep up the production of oil during the settling of the lawsuit over who owned the sea bottom.

Asked upon what authority he and Krug signed the arrangement, Clark said the attorney general has general authority to preserve and protect the property of the United States. He said the deal was made upon the joint responsibility of himself and the Secretary of Interior, and that they held many conferences over the terms before they signed the papers that were filed in the Supreme Court.

Littell Demurs

Former Assistant Attorney General Norman M. Littell—whose brief attacking the stipulations was accepted by the Supreme Court at the time it threw out the stpulations—did not agree that Clark was proecting any Government interest.

"This agreement," said Littell in a statement, "constitutes what is probably the most naive, the most incompetent and the most inadequate operating agreement, over the most vast area of oil resources, of any operating agreement in the history of the oil industry . . . No practical oil man can find here any of the protective provisions of the usual operating agreement in an oil field. Patently, the interests of the people of the United States are not adequately protected."

Littell accused the solicitor general of defying the Supreme Court and chided Clark for saying the position of the Government continues as it has.

"These shocking statements," Littell said after quoting Clark and Perlman, "fairly pose a question as to whether or not anyone is trying to 'throw this case'—the biggest case in the history of the Federal courts, and having more at issue in terms of oil resources upon which the National security is dependent than any legal controversy in the history of the country."

Sees Further Fight

After declaring the Supreme Court went out of its way to use scathing language, in washing its hands of the deal, Littell said:

"It is possible that further legal proceedings of an appropriate character may yet be necessary to enjoin the Attorney General from sanctioning the continuous exploitation of the tidelands, merely to demonstrate that a stipulation stricken from a court proceeding is not a stipulation at all. Must the solicitor general be taught the law in this hard way—and the attorney geenral?"

President Roosevelt appointed Littell to the Justice Department in 1939 and fired him three years ago after he quarreled with former Attorney General Francis Biddle. Littell at the time accused Biddle of giving discriminatory breaks to clients of Thomas E. (Tommy the Cork) Corcoran.

Meanhwile, it was learned at the Interior Department that the Krug-Clark deal is not in full force and effect that way it was made, the terms having been relaxed by further deals between Interior officials and California State officials.

Harry M. Edelstein, assistant solicitor of the department, said some changes had been made to accomplish smooth operation.

Jury Convicts D. C. Painter in Attack on Boys

A Municipal Court jury last night convicted a 57 year-old housepainter of two charges of indecent assault on 11-year-old boys. The jury deliberated 25 minutes.

Judge George D. Neilson on request of defense counsel delayed sentencing of James G. Mattice, 714 12th st. s.e. until November 8. The judge thanked the jury for "the great service they had rendered the District of Columbia," and said he completed agreed with their decision.

Mattice was accused of inviting the two young boys to help him paint a garage in the rear of 3535 Holmead pl. nw. last June. After they had painted for a while Mattice invited the boys into the garage allegedly for the purpose of paying them.

Once inside, the boys said that Mattice wired the door shut and tried to assault them.
